HOUSES LOOTED OF GEMS

Sensational Robberies Linked with Police Evidence That Escaped Highwayman Had Been Seen in Vicinity Lead to New Hunt for "Raffles."

Clyde G. Bruhm, the Claude Duval of modern highwaymen, is reported back in his old haunts along the North Shore and Boston.

Simultaneous with this news comes official report from the police of Manchester-by-the-Sea of two fresh burglaries in the aristocratic cottage colony of that coast resort.

Many thousand dollars' worth of jewels and other valuables have just been stolen from the Summer homes of J. Arthur Brooks and Amory Eliot.

While the police are unwilling publicly to admit that Bruhm is at large in their territories, it is known that he is thought to be ranging in that section.

One prominent police inspector of Greater Boston had reported to him that Bruhm was seen about Manchester only this week. Bruhm is said to have appeared in Argos set also.

Back to Old Haunts.

The news that this month, whose escape and flight from the police late last month was the criminal sensation of the Summer in Boston and New England, is back here again is causing uneasiness not only to the police, but also to property owners.

Two Breaks Same Night.

The new breaks at Manchester have all the earmarks of being committed by the same person who performed the long list of breaks already charged up to Bruhm by the police.

On the night of September 10 the Brooks and Eliot homes were entered in Manchester. The Manchester police have sent out lists of the articles stolen. It will be noticed that practically everything taken was such as could easily be pawned or otherwise negotiated. This was character istic of the boy when the police said they took from Bruhm's rooms in South Boston.

The articles taken from the home of J. Arthur Brooks were

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, New York, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Connie Mack's bunch of ball players, who still have the idea that they will win the American League pennant, were the guests of the New York team for a double-header here this afternoon. Judging from the actions of the team from Philadelphia, in yesterday's opening game they were not ideal guests, and although they entertained New York players and the New York crowd their methods failed to please.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Sept. 14.—The last game of the year was played on the old field this afternoon when the Giants and Doves got together to wipe that the game of yesterday off the boards. The New Yorkers had made arrangements to leave for the West last night, but had to stay over.

McGraw and company resolved to take no liberties with Harry Smith and his outfit because they realized the Doves of today are not the Doves of two months ago. It was a fight from the drop of the hat, both managers having out their strongest teams.

EXPERT JURY TO DECIDE ON POLE DISPUTE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A committee of scientists representing the leading universities and the Arctic and Geolographical societies of the East is being quietly formed, it was learned to-day, to pass on the North Pole controversy and decide whether Dr. A. Cook or Commander Peary was the first to reach ninety degrees north latitude.

The committee is being formed in representatives of the societies by quietly approaching the various men whom it is desired to have on the committee. It will probably be headed by Professor William Hallock, of the department of physics of Columbia University.

TUG RAMS FERRY OFF JERSEY CITY

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Men and women on the crowded Erie ferryboat Tuxedo were thrown into a panic during the rush hour to-day when the vessel was rammed how on by one of the big Lackawanna sea-going tugs just after the Tuxedo had left her Jersey City slip on her way to the foot of Chambers street. A number of women fainted, but to one was hurt. The Tuxedo was considerably damaged and went back to her slip.

CAPTAIN NILES TO BE A REAR ADMIRAL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Rear Admiral Daniel Delehanty Vincent Stewart, who has been promoted through the retirement of Rear Admiral Sperry on September 2, will be transferred to the retired list Sep tember 15. Through Admiral Stuart's retirement Captain Kenneth Niles will be promoted to the rank of rear admiral. Commander Thomas Sibbel Rogers to that captain. Lieutenant Commander Casey Bruce Morgan to that of commander and Lieutenant Walter Mascil Falconer to that of lieutenant commander.

TEMPTED BY WATER, "MR. MUD" JUMPED

NEW YORK, Sept. 14. The most startling case of auto suggestion or self-hypnotism which has ever come to the knowledge of the police developed to-day in the explanation of the man who gave the name of Eugene L. McCarthy of No. 38 Crescent avenue, Dorchester, Mass., as to why he jumped from the Brooklyn bridge.

He was to-day discharged from the Brooklyn Hospital thoroughly sound. Mr. Carthy, who was unable to remember his name or address, he lived until to-day, said that the idea of jumping from the bridge seized possession of his mind while he was riding over it last Wednesday during a visit to New York on his vacation. He tried to throw off the notion, but could not, and finally against his will the idea impelled him to make the leap.

After leaving the hospital McCarthy was taken to the Adams street court and arraigned on a charge of attempted suicide before Magistrate Tighe. When he was picked up from the water he said his home was E. S. Mud. To-day he explained this by saying that he had struck the mud at the bottom of the East River and that was the only idea in his mind when he came to the surface.

First Trip to New York.

"I was going to Philadelphia to visit some friends," he told the magistrate, "but stopped off at New York to see the city. I have never been here before. One of the first things I wanted to see last Wednesday morning was the Brooklyn bridge. The height and majesty of the great structure always attracted me.

"So I went down town and took a trolley car and rode across. But when I was half way across, I looked down and saw the water between the two iron masts. Everything drew my eyes. The idea suddenly popped into my mind that a man could jump into my mind that a man could jump and reach the water. That was all. But the longer I watched the water down there the more the idea took hold of me. I wondered whether a man might jump and live.

"When I got to the other side the idea was stronger than ever. I tried to shake it off by laughing at myself, but I could not. I went to a restaurant and had something to eat and bought a newspaper and tried to read it, after which I stood on the idea out of my mind. But I could not do it.

Just Had to Go Back.

"Then I tried to take hold of myself, so to speak, and determined to get the silly notion out of my mind. I thought the best way to do it was to ride back over the bridge to the Manhattan side, so I got on a trolley car and rode back. But as soon as I was on the bridge again the notion took hold of me with redoubled force.

"Once in Manhattan, I thought I would go uptown and see some more of New York. But I could not do it. That was just it. I could not do it. In spite of myself my steps turned back toward the bridge again and before I knew it I was on a trolley car.

"As the car started up the incline the idea had possession of my mind to such a degree that it fascinated me. Now, there was no hope of my being able to shake it off. I thought my better sense would prevail and that when I reached the middle span I would just laugh and go on.

"But when I reached the middle span my legs seemed to obey the impulse of my mind before I could tell them to stay in the car. Almost before I knew it I had leaped from the footboard and was climbing the railing of the bridge. Then I made the leap. I know that really I did not know what I was doing. Not thought of suicide was ever in my head."

BRIDGE JUMPER FORMERLY BOSTON CUSTOMS INSPECTOR

Eugene L. McCarthy of No. 38 Crescent avenue, Dorchester, was an inspector in the Boston Custom House up to last March, when he resigned on account of ill health and left for home soon after. His illness, which is an outgrowth of old physical troubles, contracted in the Spanish war, in Porto Rico, left him a total wreck. He was badly wounded in the hip and suffered other injuries. He has wasted his time in Boston.

He is twenty-nine years old and unmarried. Living with his aged mother, Mrs. Ellen Eugene, was apparently normal and of steady habits, drawing home 90 money to her for finally his.

He left home March 16, last, saying he was going on a sea voyage. In South America he returned in June for a few days, then left for Europe. On August 20 his mother received a letter from him in London. Nothing he has received from Mother Mrs. She did not know he was in New York.

Neighbors speak highly of McCarthy for his steady habits. He was fond, however, of travel.

WASHINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Sept. 14.—The Senators, who play better ball against the Red Sox than they do against any other team in the league, tried out the speed boys in the second battle of the series to-day. At that they looked easy for our fellows, the Red Sox being easily a 2 to 1 better team.

Doc Gessler and Bob Unglaub, former Boston players, laid themselves out to beat the heads as neither of them relished very much the transfer from the Hub to the Capital.

The game over at the other grounds, of course, split the crowd to a certain extent, but there was a good-sized gathering of the fans considering the fact that the Red Sox were playing the tailenders of the American League while the Deves were leading the lusty Giants.

It was a fine day for baseball and the weather might were quite well filled when the game began.

COAL DEALER FINED FOR SHORT WEIGHT

For selling 1,570 pounds of coal instead of 2,000 pounds to a poor Malden woman, Eugene R. Morse, son of Eugene S. Morse of Eugene S. Morse & Co., No. 100 Medford street, Charlestown, was fined $50 by Judge Bruce in the Malden Court to-day. He appealed. Sealer of Weights and Measures William E. Dame of Malden discovered the case, telling the court that the load was short-weight. Morse took the stand in his own behalf and said that two orders were delivered from the same team, one ton having been taken off the load in Malden before that acid up by

PACERS TRY FOR WORLD'S POLE RECORD

RACE TRACK, SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Three races and a special event against the world's pacing record to pole by Hedgewood Boy and Lady Maude C. made up the regular racing card for the second day at the state fair track. The track was in splendid shape and the prospects seemed good for an extremely fast mile or the great brother and sister who established the record of 2.02¾, a few weeks ago.

There were only three starters in the Onondaga stake for 2.08 pacers, and of these George Gano looked to have an easy thing. A field of six were named for the 2.05 pace, and Baron Whips and Dorley Hal were about equal favorites. Only three colts were noted in the event for three year-olds, James A., being the best liked.

WOMAN IN DEATH CASE IS HOPEFUL

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Richmond, proprietor of the Hotel Florence, No. 135 Cambridge street, East Cambridge, under indictment for the murder of Stewart McTavish, an East Cambridge Insane Hospital attendant, who was found dead in her room at the hotel July 23, was visited to-day at the East Cambridge jail by her daughter, Mrs. Mae Mills of North Abington. Mrs. Mills states to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that her mother was in good health and was still cheerful, in spite of the fact that her attorneys, Ralph W. Gleaq of Boston, had notified her yesterday of her indictment. Mrs. Richmond will be arraigned before Judge Bell in Cambridge to-day.

HEAVY FINE ON A STREET CAR MASHER

For touching a woman whom he did not know on the shoulder in a street car, William Morrissey, of No. 470 Main street, Charlestown, was to-day fined $25 in the Charlestown court and a $50 a fine was added because he thumped Dr. John A. Barry of No. 45 Monument square, for protesting against his action.

John Curran of the same address as Morrissey, was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction for assault upon the doctor. The woman for whom the doctor got so badly beaten that he had to remain in bed for four days, was Mrs. Etta Eustis, of No. 205 Broadway, Somerville. She was on a car on her way home in company with her husband and two friends.

Morrissey and Curran are said to have acted roughly and the doctor not knowing that Mrs. Eustis was accompanied by her husband, interfered for her protection. The two men and Robert Murphy followed the doctor when he left the car and according to Morrissey, Curran hit the doctor and felled him out. Murphy was arrested and discharged. Morrissey and Curran appealed.

ONE YEAR FOR LARCENY.

In Charlestown Police Court to-day Edward Walsh, 24, of Ward 7, Dorchester, was sentenced to one year in the house of correction for larceny. He pleaded guilty and was held in $1,000 bonds. Yesterday afternoon he was arrested in the Scollyan Square terminal by Special Officer William Rebello, who alleges that Walsh was in the act of picking the pocket of Mrs. D. C. Hall. When taken to Station 15 three pocketbooks were found on him.

NEW DISTRICT RECEIVERS.

Judge Colt in the United States Circuit Court to-day appointed Addison E. Cudworth of Londonderry, C., and Fred W. Crandall of New York, auxiliary receivers for the District of Massachusetts in the case of the Hardware & Wooden Ware Co. of New York, and accepted the resignation of Nicholas H. Colwell, who had been receiver since February 11, 1908.

MOVE UNDER WAY TO PLACE 5,000 BORDEN STRIKERS AT WORK

FALL RIVER, Sept. 14.—Believing that the strike in the M. C. B. Borden cotton mills which resulted in closing them all down yesterday for the first time in twenty-three years will be prolonged, many of the 5,000 operatives began to-day to look for new situations in the ninety other mills of this city.

Of the 1,000 weavers who walked out with little difficulty would be experienced in obtaining places because there has been a lack of weavers here for many months. Besides, not being able to supply all of his looms The latter wages being paid in New Bedford also had a tendency to draw the more expert hands to that city, and to-day many of the weavers of this city found it convenient to take a little trip to New Bedford.

Seek Work for Strikers.

The ring spinners, card room help and lean engine crew of employes, out of work, who number about 1,000, find it somewhat more difficult to find places. But it was declared to-day that if the strike continues a week that practically all of the help that went out of the Borden mills would have places.

Samuel Hathaway, the superintendent of the mills, after a trip to New York, where he interviewed Mr. Borden, reached here to-day, but was reticent as to the result of their conference.

"Is there anything new in the situation?" Mr. Hathaway was asked to-day.

"Nothing," was the laconic reply.

"If I see you later will you have some thing to say about the trouble?"

"I'll have nothing to say."

"Don't think that the trouble may be fixed up?"

"I have nothing to say."

Big Mill Fires Drawn.

Superintendent Hathaway went to the mills early to-day, and under his direction the fires that burn constantly under the giant boilers were drawn. This action was regarded as significant by those in close touch with the situation as indicating that the mill owners do not propose to put an end to the strike in the immediate future at least.

Of those who lost their jobs a part of them who are members of unions will draw a strike benefit of $4 or more a week. Belonging to the carders' union of the strike are about 200; to the slasher tenders, 27, and to the loom fixers, about 50.

A great many of the employes of the mills were not members of the unions here and they will not have the benefit of the strike benefits.

Strikers On "Vacation."

"One of the remarkable features of the trouble noticeable to-day was the disposition of many out of work to take a vacation and look upon the situation not with its redeeming feature from that standpoint. Little parties of young women, dressed in their holiday clothing, left the city to-day laughing and chatting happily.

"I've deserved a 'vacation,' remarked one of the girls, 'and now I'm going to have it. When I come back I'll get another job. There are nearly a hundred other mills here, you know, and then there are other places besides Fall River."

Magnificent Gifts for Anita Stewart.

DINGWALL, Ross-shire, Scotland.—Magnificent gifts, as costly as a King's ransom, consisting of gems and jewelry of rare and antique workmanship, arrived here to-day at Dingwall Castle, where the nuptials of Prince Miguel of Braganza, son of the pretender to the Portuguese throne, and Miss Anita Stuart, daughter of Mrs. Alice Henry Smith of New York, will take place at noon to-morrow in the presence of a brilliant assemblage. The Prince, who went to London last week to welcome a party of the guests, is back in Dingwall to-day. The party accompanying the Prince back to Dingwall included the Duke and Duchess of Braganza, the Princess Adelgonde of Bourbon, Countess Torrinci, Count Sigray and Count Ceschmico. Among the Americans who are already at the Tuileries Castle are Judge and Mrs. James Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin and others. The preparations for the marriage, which were confided to Miss Stuart, made on a royal scale at St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic Chapel, where the Prince attended mass daily. Bishop Chilholm of Aberdeen will perform the ceremony, assisted by Father Fraser of Dingwall and Father McDonald of Glenfinan. Miss Stewart will enter the Catholic church after the marriage.

Miss Elkins to Wed Hitt?

PARIS—Miss Katherine Elkins, who with her mother is at the Hotel Durbis, where young William Hitt, who crossed the ocean with them, is also staying, goes to Switzerland next week. Mr. Hitt, not long on the scene, but constantly ever since, has been paying the greatest attention to her. In her continual round of shopping in Paris he is always with her. They went together one day to the swellest shop in the Place Vendome. The gossips here talk of their probable engagement, although they admit that the possibility of the match is not at variance with the Duke of the Abruzzi being with drawn might entirely change the situation.

Makes Call in Aeroplane.

COURNAL, France.—M. Favigan has put the aeroplane to a new use. Wishing to pay a visit to the Chateau Taintignies, some miles distant from the aerodrome, he invited his mother to join him in aeroplane and flew leisurely across country, settling gently near the entrance to the chateau. After chatting for a short time with his friends, he ascended again and, with his mother, flew back to the aerodrome. He was absent for about an hour and a half, and encountered no unfortunate gusts of wind.

Abruzzi to Make New Climb.

MILAN—Senator Bettoni, Princess Letitia's host at Brescia, is authority for the statement that the Duke of the Abruzzi telegraphed her that he proposes to undertake another expedition to the Himalayas in the near future. The Princess, alluding to the telegram in the presence of Senator Bettoni, said she was convinced that her stepson would abandon exploration and settle down to married life.

Capture Blue Army's Airship.

BERLIN—The annual maneuvres of the German Army will comprise special experiments in the application of airships to war. The probable fate of such vessels of war as are now constructed was demonstrated at Assamstadt when a Gross airship belonging to the Blue Army was compelled to fly very low owing to the wind. It became entangled in a tree and was captured by the Red Army before it could be extricated.

German Socialists Gain.

BERLIN—The Social Democratic Congress is in session at Leipsic. It was announced that the actual membership of the party organization is nearly 440,000, while in the electorate the party's voting strength is reckoned at about 3,000,000. There are about 15,000,000 electors altogether in the country.

SQUEEZED BY AUTO WHEEL AN HOUR

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., Sept. 14.—When his wife reversed his large automobile by mistake, Robert A. Mathewson was knocked down and badly injured. He was jammed between one of the rear wheels and the barn while the wheel continued to revolve against his neck. Mrs. Mathewson fainted when she saw what she had done. For nearly an hour Mr. Mathewson remained pinioned by his head behind the revolving wheel. When the wife revived she was able to follow her husband's instructions and operate the switch plug, thus stopping the engine.

KEPT WEDDING SECRET TWO YEARS

Surprise has been caused among the friends of William F. Curren of Hancock street, Everett, and Matilda Corrigan by the announcement that they have been married for two years.

The fact that the young couple had such a secret was unknown, even to their most intimate friends. It became known on Monday, when Mr. Curren announced the marriage at a party.

DYNAMITE BRIDGE WORK THIRD TIME

BUFFALO, Sept. 14.—A big hoisting crane used in the construction of a new railroad bridge and owned by the S. J. McCain Construction Company of Mercer, Pa., was blown up with dynamite by unknown persons early to-day in an attempt to wreck the bridge. This is the third attempt to blow up railroad bridges within this city in the past few weeks. The latest attempt is thought to have been the result of the "open shop" policy of the construction company. No one was injured.

DOG BITES GIRLS TRYING TO SAVE PET

Estelle Louise Mitchell, aged fourteen, and Helen Marcella Mitchell, thirteen, daughters of Councilman and Mrs. George Mitchell of No. 15 Myrtle street, Malden, are to-day slowly recovering from the effects of bites and a bad fright which they received when attacked by a bulldog last Saturday. The girls are under the constant attention of Dr. F. O. Randell, who believes they will entirely recover.

The bulldog, owned by E. J. Pennett of No. 2 Jordan Terrace, is being kept under lock and key and under constant observation to determine if it develops signs of rabies.

Boys "Sicked" Him On.

The girls received their injuries while defending a pet French poodle from a savage attack by the bulldog.

"Estelle and I were going to the library," said Miss Helen. "Estelle was carrying our little dog and I was carrying the books when we were going to exchange. As we were in Salem street Helen set the dog down on the sidewalk. Just then we saw a big white bulldog on an errand. It was playing with two boys and they 'sicked' it on our little poodle.

"Helen called out to me and I picked the poodle up. But the big bulldog jumped at the poodle and bit me three times on my right arm and once on my left. Helen ran up and tried to get the bulldog off of me and he turned on her and bit her twice on her right arm. Then the dog ran away."

Had Wounds Cauterized.

"We went to four doctors' offices but they were all out. Then we went to a drug store where Dr. Bell cauterized the bites. Then we hurried home and luckily found Dr. Randall come to see me. I'm glad we saved our little dog anyway."

The bulldog is not more than a year old and has never been thought to be vicious. Mr. Pennett has locked the animal up for observation.

EARLE'S SOUL MATE QUITS HIM IN PARIS

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Miss Gertrude Buell Dunn, the latest "soul mate" of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, is on her way back to America with all her dreams of platonic affinity shattered. While here Miss Dunn met friends who gave her advice which, coupled with the fact that Earle's conduct had become more erratic since leaving Carlsbad, forced upon her the realization that she had made a mistake. She determined to return home without delay.

Miss Dunn is on the ocean, sailing under an assumed name, and will arrive in New York the latter part of this week. While here Miss Dunn and Earle lived apart, maintaining the relations of brother and sister. Miss Dunn met many persons in the artist quarter who were unaware of her identity.

She made a pleasing impression. It is generally accepted that the girl was simply misled by foolish ideas of mental and artistic affinity which Earle advanced and it is believed that Earle is still here. His first wife, with their young son, left Paris when she heard of his arrival. Earle was unable to see his son since coming here.

It is believed that Earle paid for Miss Dunn's return passage. Every effort was made to conceal her presence in Paris and her sailing for home.

FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Charged with over speeding his automobile, Alfred A. Sower of the Hotel Oxford, Boston, was fined $40 by Judge Stone in the Cambridge police court to-day. The offense occurred in Arlington, September 8. While returning from the races in Lowell. Last February Sower paid a fine of $15 for over speeding in the same place.

WEDS GIRL HE WAS ACCUSED OF STEALING

Nicola De Vito married Miss Marietta D'Orazio in the office of Justice of the Peace Arcille Forte on Fremont Row to-day. The ceremony was the aftermath of charges of abduction against the bridegroom and his mother, Mrs. Egidia De Vito. Mrs. De Vito had already been sentenced to three months in the house of correction and held in $500 for the superior court upon her appeal.

Young De Vito, who says he is twenty-two, while his bride is thirteen, was to appear before Judge Burke in the Municipal Court to-day upon a continuance. But there was no hearing. De Vito told the judge he was going to marry the girl at once and the court released him upon his own recognizance until to-morrow. He was told to have his marriage certificate with him when he returned then.

Young De Vito met the bride-elect some after he left the court room and the marriage took place at once. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the bride's mother and the latter's attorney. It is said that Mrs. Tufo, presiding officer of the woman's session, will to-day ask District Attorney Hill to not prosecute the case against Mrs. De Vito. It is believed that this romance of the North End will end happily with the marriage bells. De Vito lives with his mother at No. 488 Commercial street. The D'Orazio home is No. 388, the same thoroughfare.

When the bride of to-day disappeared from home, Mrs. De Vito and her son were accused of abducting her and created great interest in the case in the Italian colony.

GIBLIN HALTS 'QUEER' DEAL BY ALDERMEN

What looked like grass of special privileges by private citizens through influence with one or more members of the Board of Aldermen has been blocked by Alderman Giblin, who declares that the matter looks very "queer" to him and that he proposes to have the matter looked into.

At the meeting of the Board yesterday afternoon there was presented what purported to be a favorable report from the committee on Buildings for permission to erect a marquise over Westland avenue from Huntington Chambers, and another one from the building at Nos. 29-31 Summer street.

The orders were signed pretty suddenly on the board and they were both passed. By that time Giblin woke up to the fact that he was a member of the committees that had apparently passed favorably upon the orders, and that he did not know anything about them.

"I do not believe that these orders were recommended by our committee, nor even considered by it," declared Giblin bluntly.

Alderman Hallantyne, who is chairman of the committee, was called about the orders. He added mystery to the matter by declaring that he had not been present at any meeting when the orders were considered. He added that he wanted to disclaim all responsibility for the orders, as he knew nothing about them.

Upon a motion of Alderman Cotton, the two orders were referred back to the committee. Giblin is now trying to find out who was apparently trying to get the orders by the board without members of the committee knowing anything about them, and if there was any graft in the proceedings.

BIG U. S. JURY CASES.

The Federal Grand Jury convened for the September term to-day with about forty cases on the list, which includes the record for the big list in due to the fact that there was no sitting in June last.

BAD WRECK ON NEW HAVEN HOLDS TRAINS

Trains between New York and Boston were delayed more than three hours by a wreck that occurred early to-day at Clinton, about thirty miles from New London. The Adams Express special from Washington, due in Boston at 3 o'clock this morning, was running at a high rate of speed when a driving rod of the engine snapped. The engine slid sideways from the track, the rails torn up and the seven cars piled up in a heap across both tracks. So far as can be learned, no one was seriously injured.

Great anxiety was felt in Boston when it was learned that the trains bound in this direction had been held up by a wreck, and it was feared that the wreck was of a passenger train. This feeling was dispelled to some extent when the news was made public that it was not a passenger train that had met with the mishap.

Made Detour of 150 Miles.

At the South Station but little information could be obtained, and those who went there to meet the early trains had to satisfy themselves with the bulletin that the trains were three hours late.

The Bar Harbor express and some of the other trains found it necessary to make a detour of 150 miles to get around the wreckage.

Wrecking crews were soon on the spot, but they found the engine of the derailed train so badly smashed and the cars wedged across the tracks that it was very difficult to clear the debris.

A big force worked to get the cars out of the way and the track relayed. In the meantime passengers bound north to Boston and other New England points were held up, as well as those headed toward New York.

Tracks Badly Torn Up.

It was one of the worst wrecks that has occurred on the New Haven, so far as tearing up tracks and damaging cars are concerned, in a long time, the one redeeming feature of it being that no lives were lost.

The train contained much perishable freight and several valuable trotters, but even one was injured. Wreckers were sent out from New London and New Haven, arriving at 6 o'clock. The track was torn up for twenty rods, completely blocking the Shore line. It was found that the rails couldn't be replaced so that traffic could be resumed till late this afternoon, and Shore line trains were sent over the "Air Line" to Boston.

The train is known as the million dollar fast freight, because of the large amount of valuable freight always carried by express from Washington to Boston.

LAWSON TO PAY $8,000 FOR BOOKS

Thomas W. Lawson is going to buy a rare set of Elbert Hubbard's writings, printed on genuine vellum, if he doesn't go broke in the meantime. There are only forty volumes, and they cost only $200 a volume, or $8,000 for the set. Perhaps this is why Mr. Lawson was so excited when he learned that he sent to the Roycroft Fraternity at East Aurora, N. Y., the proviso that he should have privilege of cancelling the order if at any time he might go "broke."

TAFT MOTORS TO BOSTON FOR BIG BANQUET

President Taft left Beverly about 5 o'clock this afternoon and motored to Boston to attend the dinner this evening in his honor given by the Chamber of Commerce in Mechanics Building. The President was accompanied by Mrs. Taft and her sister, Mrs. Moor. They went to the Touraine.

The leaving of the President from his Summer home was not accompanied by any ceremony nor demonstration. The automobile was shot around the house, the President and his party climbed in and they were off.

As the car bore away the distinguished citizen who has brought Beverly into the limelight of the world, many residents were on the street, at their doors or windows, to wave him an revoir, because they knew he is to be back next year.

Just before the President left the rumor reached Beverly that Secretary Ballinger of the Interior had either tendered his resignation or was about to do so. On this point Secretary Carpenter made this statement:

"The President will give no statement to-day in regard to the Ballinger affair."

Escorted by fifty men of the National Lancers and a detail of mounted police, the President will be driven from the Touraine to the banquet hall at 6.15. Accompanying him will be Frank W. Rollins and Frederick P. Fish, the committee of the Chamber of Commerce appointed to receive him.

Reception to Be Informal.

John Chandler Cobb, second vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, and former president of the old Board of Trade, is among those who will greet President Taft on his arrival at the hall and assist in presenting to him the members and their guests.

The reception to President Taft will be entirely informal. It is realized that the time between 6:30 and 7:30, when the banquet begins, will be too short to permit of formal handshaking, and the committee, it was stated this afternoon, wishes to spare the Chamber's distinguished guest the ordeal which an official greeting of each of the seventeen hundred who will meet him would involve. The committee is bearing in mind the fact that Mr. Taft starts tomorrow morning on a journey which, at best, will severely test his powers of endurance, and the intended spare no effort to make it certain that he will carry away with him only the pleasantest memories of his visit to Boston.

Will Stay at Touraine.

It is arranged to have the serving of the dinner completed at a few minutes after 9. Then the President will be presented, and will make his formal address. He will probably leave the hall and return to the Touraine at 10:15 o'clock.

In the absence of President James J. Storrow, who is in Europe, Vice-President Bernard J. Rothwell of the Chamber of Commerce will preside at the banquet and will introduce the President. The other addresses, which will be brief, will be delivered by Governor Draper and Mayor Hibbard. It is possible that the condition of Mayor Hibbard's throat will prevent his speaking.

The other guests will be General Carlos Garcia Velez, Minister from Cuba; Senor Don Epifanio Portela, Minister from Argentina; George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy; Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor; Oliver Wendell Holmes, Justice of the United States Supreme Court; United States Senator W. Murray Crane, Senator Henry E. Burnham, Congressman John W. Weeks, Congressman W. C. Lovering, Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell, Congressman Ernest W. Roberts, Congressman John A. Kelliher, Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, Congressman William S. Greene, Congressman Charles G. Washburn, Rear Admiral Swift, Colonel R. H. Patterson, U. S. A.; Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Burr, U. S. A.; Judge Francis C. Lowell, Postmaster Edward C. Mansfield, William A. Marble, Welding Ring, president of the New York Produce Exchange; Archbishop W. H. O'Connell, Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu, Rev. Howard N. Brown, Rev. William H. Huntington, Frederick W. Hamilton, Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham, Senator Albert F. Tredway, Speaker Joseph Walker, William Cabell Cromwell, United States District Attorney Asa P. French, W. F. Wood and Judge Lloyd E. Chamberlain.

Leaves in Special Train.

Elaborate precautions for the protection of the President have been arranged. There will be 300 policemen along the route which he will follow, and 70 men in uniform will be on duty in the banquet hall.

President Taft's train will be run as the first section of the 10 o'clock from the South Station to-morrow morning. It will comprise baggage car, an empty coach to give steadiness to the parking, a parlor car for the President's clerks and the newspaper correspondents, and finally the President's private car. This train will be run special from Albany to Buffalo, but thereafter will become a part of regular trains on the line of the proposed route.

17-Year-Old Star Is Here for New Theatre

Miss Leah Bateman Hunter, a little English girl of seventeen, has arrived in New York to appear in one of the leading parts of the tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra at the opening of the New Theatre in November, and she will perhaps become the most talked of young actress on the American stage. She is a blonde, with sparkling blue eyes, an abundance of color and a vivacious manner. Her first notable part was in "The School for Scandal," when she was Lady Teazle. She was seven years old at that time.

25 BABIES IN DANGER DURING HOSPITAL FIRE

Fire broke out in the laundry of the Massachusetts Infants' Hospital, Chestnut street, opposite Forbes street, Jamaica Plain, today and for a time every nurse and the eleven assistants in the institution stood beside each of the twenty-five babies ready to carry them out of the building at a moment's notice.

A great crowd gathered, and many volunteers offered their services in case danger should become imminent. Through the coolness and discipline enforced by the acting superintendent, Miss Getza Whitridge, a panic was averted and, while for a time, the smoke which filled part of the building caused great excitement, excellent order was maintained.

The fire was discovered by a laundress in the east part of the hospital at 7:30 o'clock. The young woman notified Miss Whitridge. Four regular nurses and eleven attendants were at that time on duty in the different wards for the children, none of whom is over two years of age.

Miss Whitridge, who is acting for Superintendent Cheney in her absence, called to a passerby to ring in the alarm. While this was being done Miss Whitridge rang the emergency gong in the hospital, summoning all of the nurses not on duty. All of the babies in the east side were hastily carried over to the west wing.

These hastily wrapped each baby in blankets ready to be carried from the building. Miss Whitridge then investigated the fire. She found that it was caused by an overheated dryer.

The firemen soon extinguished the flames and damage was not more than $200.

CLERMONT II. IS CHEERED ON TRIAL SPIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The wheels of progress apparently turned backward a century to-day when a quaint little steamboat, whose like no living eye ever had seen, churned up the waters of the Kill von Kull, the narrow strip of salt water that cuts Staten Island off from New Jersey. The boat was the Clermont II, replica of the first steamboat designed by Robert Fulton, the centenary of whose epoch-making trip up the Hudson river is soon to be celebrated jointly with the tercentenary of the discovery of the river by Hendrik Hudson.

Manned by the officers and men of the Dutch warship Utrecht and carrying as passengers several of the officials of the Hudson-Fulton commission, the Clermont II repeated the first steamboat designed by this afternoon for her trial spin. The original Clermont had a speed of about five miles an hour and the purpose of to-day's trial was to tune the engine of the replica, a present to the United States from the people of Holland, as nearly as possible to the recorded performance of the original machinery on that memorable trip of one hundred years ago.

Every craft that the quaint little steamboat passed did her honor with whistle or gun, and the crowds that lined the wharves near which she had been docked since she was swung overboard from the deck of the great Holland-American liner upon which she had crossed the ocean voiced their patriotism in ringing cheers as the tiny engine set the unprotected, eight-hinded paddle wheels in motion and the little craft swung slowly out into the stream.

PROSSERS ARE RECONCILED BY RAZOR ATTACK

According to friends, a complete reconciliation has been brought about between Chief Steward William Prosser, U. S. N., and his pretty wife, Madeline, who is recovering at the Massachusetts General Hospital from a slashed throat, the result of an attack committed by Thomas H. Greer, a former Beverly automobile agent.

Greer is now confined at the Charles Street Jail, where he was taken from the Relief Hospital, after recovering from his attempt to kill himself with the same razor. Greer is said to have been in love with Mrs. Prosser.

For several weeks they roomed in the same original house at No. 19 Wigen street, where the alleged assault took place Saturday night following a telegram from Mr. Prosser to the effect that he was coming to Boston. Mrs. Prosser showed the telegram to Greer. Another attack followed.

Dr. Howland of the Massachusetts General Hospital to-day told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that Mrs. Prosser is improving rapidly and will be able to leave the institution in two or three days.

Her husband, who is stationed at Portsmouth, has visited his wife at the hospital every day and friends of the couple say that she has agreed to go back to Portsmouth to live with him again.

The housekeeper at No. 19 Alston street to-day told a reporter that Mr. Prosser was in that house but a night or two and took the last of his wife's belongings with him. Greer's wife and four children are now living in Titusville, Pa., where they went six months ago.

BLACK HAND PUTS TORCH TO A STABLE

WINCHESTON, Sept. 13.—The Black Hand Society is to-day blamed for the destruction of the barn and shed, the property of a wealthy, retired business man, John G. Sullivan, in Spring street, at midnight. Sullivan's loss is estimated at about $17,500.

Two months ago Mr. Sullivan received a letter badly scrawled which demanded $500 of him. The letter was signed "The Black Hand," and contained the dagger, skull and crossbones. It concluded with saying, "If you don't give up that $500 you will suffer for consequences."

Mr. Sullivan placed the matter in the hands of Chief of Police Callahan. The chief and his assistants worked for weeks on the case, but no clew was found to the author of the letter.

About midnight last night, Mr. Sullivan was awakened by the glare of fire. He leaped from his bed and discovered that his barn was wrapped in flames. He turned in an alarm, but by the time the firemen arrived the fire had gained such headway that they confined their efforts to saving the dwelling house and adjoining property.

The barn, a hayloft full of hay, sets of harness and vehicles were destroyed. To-day Chief Callahan and his force are hard at work trying to connect the fire with the Black Hand letters.

'IT IS DIVINE TO FLY,' SAYS D'ANNUNZIO

BRESCIA, Sept. 14.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the poet and author, who made two assents in airships here, is still rhapsodizing over the feelings he experienced.

He declares that flying is the most divine sensation conceivable, and is comparable with the most intense ideal impressions of art and love.

"Gladly," exclaimed the poet to-day, "would I abandon all things, everybody, and say adieu to earth for the joys of ethereal space.

SHERMAN'S SON TO WED UTICA BELLE

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Announcement was made of the approaching marriage of Richard Updike Sherman, son of Vice-President James S. Sherman, to Miss Eleanor Millar, a society belle of Utica. The ceremony is to take place at Calvary Episcopal Church, Utica, on October 7.

A CLOSE SHAVE.

Many of Them Happening Every Day, but Soon Forgotten.

Close shavers would be of more frequent occurrence but for the tender faces of many men, which will not permit of shaving often. Heretofore, nothing has been said in these columns about posham, a new skin discovery, in connection with its use after shaving. Its publicity and sales have been confined almost exclusively to its remarkable properties as an eczema cure; it stops the itching at once and cures the worst cases in a few days. While the application of posham after shaving is one of its minor uses such as for pimples, the complexion, etc., shavers will find it a revelation, as it does for abrasions, roughness and severe scrapings what it does for all manner of skin difficulties—heals and cures in a few hours. It is the only article possessing real antiseptic and curative value that has ever been exploited for this purpose, and will soothe and tone up the skin as no toilet preparation could possibly do.

Posham can be had for fifty cents at any reliable druggist's, particularly all Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton's drug dept., who make a specialty of it. Or the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West 25th Street, New York City, will send a trial supply free by mail to any one who will write for it. This is sufficient to show results in 24 hours.

PRINCE VISITS A YANKEE FORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 14.—Prince Kuni, his two aids, and Col. Robert M. Thompson, General J. Fred Pierson and Lieut. Commander Voeltgenau, U. S. N., made a trip to Fort Adams in an automobile to-day and the Prince was accorded a salute of twenty-one guns.

A military parade of 1,000 men and fifteen officers in command of Col. Walter Howe was reviewed by the Prince and his party. Princess Kuni was not present, she sent a letter stating that she could not stand the sun, but would be present at the ball to-night tendered by Mrs. Walter Howe this afternoon.

Later this afternoon, the Princess will be received at the Naval Training station by Rear Admiral John P. Merrill, where she will review a drill by the apprentices.

SAD FATE FOR UNTAGGED OWL

Stray birds in South Boston are warned to label themselves: "I'm not an eagle."

This precaution might have saved the life of one luckless bird which perched on a tree near City Point station. Patrolman Michael J. Greeley reported to Lieutenant Daniel Eagen that an eagle was on the tree.

"I'll shoot him," said Greeley.

There was sound of a shot without. Back came Greeley in triumph with his eagle.

"Great Scott," said Eagen, "but that must be a fine eagle if it wasn't an owl."

"Owl nothing," replied Greeley. "Well anyhow, it was a fine shot."

There were many callers at the station to-day to see Greeley's "eagle."

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

SLAYER'S 2ND VICTIM DEAD

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The hunt for the kidnapper who killed Theresa Peccopia was resumed to-day by the police. They declared their a new clew had been found that would result in his arrest within a few hours.

Freddy Infusino, two and one-half years old, the second victim of the kidnapper's when he lured three children from in front of their homes to a ravine and shot them, died to-day. Theresa, who was seven years old, was instantly killed by the kidnapper, and Pasquale Infusino, six years old, was shot and seriously wounded.

The entire police force and detective corps of the city with two bloodhounds searched all night for the slayer.

PEARY ON LONE DASH TO POLE?

Surprising Revelations of the Naval Commander's Arctic Expedition Results from Discussion Which Breaks Out Among the Dissatisfied Crew of the Roosevelt

Many amazing and some contradictory statements concerning the alleged discovery of the North Pole come to-day from Battle Harbor, Labrador, where Commander Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, is still lying.

One story is that there is bitter dissension among the crew of the Roosevelt, and that when they get a full chance to talk some surprising revelations will be the result.

It is now understood that Peary had no more than one Eskimo with him in the final dash for the Pole, and it is also asserted that even the one Eskimo was left behind finally, and Peary alone reached the polar point.

There is reported to be much feeling against Commander Peary among the Roosevelt's crew because all the white men were sent back in charge of supporting parties and the post of honor was accorded to Matthew Henson, Peary's negro attendant, and four Eskimos. Henson himself and two of the Eskimos, it is said according to another report, one day's march from the Pole.

Captain Bartlett of the Roosevelt was turned back at the 85th parallel, though he pleaded, it is said, to be allowed to go on.

Whitten Confirms Cook.

A dispatch from St. John's, N. F., says that Ainu Whitten, boatswain of the Peary auxiliary ship Erik in 1905 and in 1908, supports the statements of Dr. Cook as to the appropriation of stores by Peary.

Of his predictions Whitten naturally says much of Peary and knew of Peary's plans. He was also in the Erik in the Summer of 1907, when she left Sydney and at Sydney alongside the schooner John R. Bradley, which Dr. Cook was chartering for the Pole. The Erik that year went to Hudson Bay for the Canadian government. Whitten says that the Bradley was abundantly equipped for Cook's expedition, having supplies for at least three years.

He confirms Dr. Cook's charge at Copenhagen that Peary's men took Cook's provisions, adding that not only did the crew of the ship take Cook's stores that were at Etah, but Bradley sent to America, thirty miles distant, to remove Cook's provisions which were stored there.

The boatswain also made the statement that both Cook's and Fischer's collection of ivory and skins, some of them very valuable, were likewise taken.

He said the trouble with Peary's previous expeditions had been the lack of supplies. Instead of remaining away for three years, Commander Peary was compelled to return after about fifteen months, the real reason Whitten declared, being that he did not have enough supplies to remain longer.

Interview With Peary.

The Boston Journal to-day prints an interview with Commander Peary which it announces was received by wireless, via Cape Ray, N. F.

"What were some of the chief incidents of the journey?" he was asked.

"It was less eventful than any of my previous trips. The actual reaching of the ninetieth parallel, and being able to take observations at the Pole itself was an event of supreme importance to science; an event which quite naturally makes us all feel in exultation while. I hope, is pardonable; but there was less adventure, less of the thrilling and hairbreadth escapes than in earlier days, before we had as thorough a knowledge of the Arctic regions as we have now."

Dangers of Starvation.

"What were the principal dangers to be guarded against?"

"The chief danger was one which could not be guarded against. We had to take our chances and trust in providence. Care in selection of men and dogs, to see that we had some lacking in strength, courage and endurance; watchfulness over the condition of our sledges and how they were packed; knowledge of the quantity and kind of food required and seeing that supplies were plentiful at certain points—all these tend to lessen, but not entirely eliminate the constant dangers of starvation, freezing and becoming lost. But the one chief peril all Arctic explorers on frozen seas can only watch for and hope will not catch them is the sudden opening up of leads. Ice which appears solid as a mountain of granite may suddenly crack and engulf you."

"Was there any land there—anything to suggest the idea that it was the extreme northern point of the world?"

"No. It was very much the same as any other part of the frozen Arctic Sea in appearance. There was noticeable motion of the ice, however, and a grinding, grating sound, which we attributed to the ice movement. We spent a day at the Pole making observations and soundings. We found the sea unfathomable. After placing the United States flag at the point which observations told us was the very apex of the world we turned south for our homeward journey."

of the sun at midnight over the northern ice, as it marked the beginning of the six months of Summer day there.

"On April 7, at midnight, the sun's elevation may be taken as north 7 degrees 4 minutes, and to this must be added the sun's semi-diameter, 16 minutes, and refraction, 35 minutes, making the declination 7 degrees 55 minutes, to order that the whole sun might appear above the horizon. If, then, the sun was in the horizon at some place at midnight, the place must be as far from the Pole as the sun was from the equator, and consequently the polar distance must be equal to 7 degrees 55 minutes, or its latitude must be 82 degrees 5 minutes.

"Dr. Cook gives his latitude at the same time as 86 degrees 38 minutes. There is, therefore, a discrepancy amounting to 4 degrees 33 minutes in his latitude to be accounted for in some way, and this discrepancy is equivalent to a little more than 316 miles in the place of the observer.

"Therefore, if Mr. Cook's latitude on April 7 was 82 degrees and 5 minutes, he was 256 miles from the Pole instead of 234 miles, as he believed, and to reach the Pole April 21 would have had to travel thirty-nine miles daily. His observations show a discrepancy of 316 miles."

OSBON CHARGES EXPLORER PEARY OPENED LETTERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Previous assumption that Commander Peary would have the United States navy solidly behind him was not borne out in a letter from Rear Admiral Seaver received by public to-day by Captain B. S. Osbon, secretary of the Arctic Club of America, of which Dr. Cook is a member. The letter, under date of September 11, from Seaver reads in part as follows:

"I like Cook's attitude immensely in this unfortunate, unnecessary and unwise controversy. He certainly has been dignified, modest and manly. He has taken it in this matter."

Captain Osbon followed up his letter from the admiral with a lecture on "Who Discovered the North Pole?"

"Dr. Frederick A. Cook," he said, "was the first to prove any white man to be accounted for in some way, and this discrepancy is equivalent to a little more than 316 miles in the place of the observer.

"Therefore, if Mr. Cook's latitude on April 7 was 82 degrees and 5 minutes, he was 256 miles from the Pole instead of 234 miles, as he believed, and to reach the Pole April 21 would have had to travel thirty-nine miles daily. His observations show a discrepancy of 316 miles."

COOK ERRS BY 316 MILES, SAYS AN ASTRONOMER

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 14.—One of Dr. Cook's observations in the Arctic, made public by him in his first narrative, has been subjected to scientific test and them must meet before his claim to the discovery of the North Pole will to accepted by scientists. The result is the conclusion that Dr. Cook on April 7, 1908, was 256 miles from the North Pole instead of 234, as he calculated.

The test was made by Professor John C. Stockwell of this city, known by astronomers the world over as an astronomical mathematician and investigator.

In a statement given out here to-day Professor Stockwell says:

"I have taken the best information as to Dr. Cook's data, and I have undertaken an analysis of what his observations really are.

"Dr. Cook tells us that the night of April 7 was made notable by the swinging

LAND OF CRYSTAL IS A MYTH, SAYS COMMANDER PEARY

BATTLE HARBOR, via Cape Ray, N. F., Sept. 14.—Captain Nelson report unfounded. Nelson has a quartz crystal from Cape Sheridan, Roosevelt's winter quarters.

PEARY.

The report to which Commander Peary's message refers is in a dispatch from St. John's, N. F., which contained the report made by Captain Nellson of the steamer Tiff of his meeting with the explorer at Battle Harbor.

Nelson stated that Peary had discovered a new land nearly 200 miles south of the Pole, and in proof of it showed a piece of crystal which he asserted had been brought from there. He added that there was of course little mineral there that the explorers had informed him that the ground glistened with it, so will glass.

KAISER PROMOTES TRIP TO POLE BY MEANS OF AIRSHIP

KIEL, Sept. 14.—Prince Henry of Prussia announced to-day that Emperor William had accepted the protection of the empire assumed the German Arctic Airship Expedition, which purposes to conduct scientific research in the unknown Polar seas by means of a rigid airship.

This project was initiated before Dr. Cook and Commander Peary reported having discovered the Pole. The enterprise has received considerable pecuniary aid, it purposes also to develop airship building for scientific purposes.

BRYAN EMITS A PEARY-COOK POLAR JOKE

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 14.—William J. Bryan thinks explorers Cook and Peary both must be Democrats. He said so here to-day, and when asked why, replied: Because they work so well out in the cold. Democrats have a good deal to keep out in the cold that they do their best work. Polar conditions would just suit them."

RUSSIA CABLES CONGRATULATIONS TO LIEUT. PEARY

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—While carefully avoiding allignment on either side of the Cook-Peary controversy, the Imperial Russian Geographical Society to-day cabled its congratulations to Peary on his discovery of the Pole. A proposition to elect the commander an honorary member of the society failed because the number is limited to twelve and there is no vacancy.

MRS. SELBY'S PICTURE IN A FAMILY JAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Cupid flew out of the window when the picture of Mrs. Norman Selby, the wife of "Kid" McCoy, the pugilist, was introduced as a motor ornament in the home of John J. Bradley, at No. 383 Central Park west.

Bradley, junior member of the firm of William Bradley & Son, decorating contractors, insisted the photograph must come down off the wall, and had his way in spite of the objection of his wife.

Because of the quarrel over the pugilist's wife and other domestic disputes Mrs. Bradley, who was formerly Miss Lillie E. Kostman of No. 1756 Madison avenue, will request the Supreme Court to grant her a legal separation from her husband.

H. C. Quinby, her attorney, will plead in Special Term for $100 a week alimony for his client and a counsel fee of $1,500 to prosecute the action.

Bradley declares his wife was unwilling to register her expenditures according to his finances, which have not yet recovered from the panic of 1907.

The Bradleys were married in September, 1901.

On the fifth anniversary of their wedding day the young husband prepared a surprise for his wife. He bought the finest bunch of roses he could find and sent them to the residence of her parents, where she was visiting.

While the flowers were on their way a process server presented him with legal papers forbidding him his wife and family separation. They have one daughter, aged four years.

In her complaint Mrs. Bradley charges her husband has grossly insulted her. He makes a general denial. He declares she met Mrs. Selby at Coney Smith's in the Adirondacks a year ago last Summer, and says:

"My wife became quite friendly with Mrs. Selby, much to my displeasure." When the Bradleys returned to their Central Park west apartment Mrs. Bradley hung the picture of the pugilist's wife in a conspicuous place in the parlor.

Mr. Bradley refused to remove it. When she refused to took the picture down herself and destroyed it. Mrs. Bradley, he asserts, became hysterical and hurled the frame at him.

Attorney Quinby, Mr. Bernard, his attorney, Bradley will contend his wife deserted him to live with her parents.

STAGE FAVORITE GOES UNDER KNIFE FOR APPENDICITIS

Mrs. Eugene Walter, known on stage as Charlotte Walker.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Eugene Walter, who is known on the stage as Charlotte Walker, was stricken yesterday with appendicitis and is operated on to-day at Erdmann's private hospital. Mrs. Walter was preparing to appear in a new play being written by her husband when she became ill.

For several days she has been complaining of not feeling well, but it was thought she would soon recover her normal health. She became worse, and Dr. T. M. Grosse man, the family physician, called Dr. John F. Erdmann in consultation, and it was decided that an operation was imperative.

It was said to-day that Mrs. Walter was resting well and would be in good condition to stand the shock of the operation.

WORK DROVE J. W. CASTLES TO SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—John W. Castles, president of the Union Trust Company of No. 80 Broadway, and one of the most successful bankers in New York, who committed suicide by cutting his throat in the Grand Union Hotel, was a victim of overwork, according to information brought to Coroner Acritelli to-day. It was asserted most positively that financial trouble did not enter into his act.

For months Mr. Castles has been in poor health. He refused to take complete rest when it was advised by physicians, but insisted that exercise was the result. Then it was that he was persuaded by Mrs. Dana to go to the sanitarium at Kerhonkson, N. Y. Although absolute rest was prescribed, Mr. Castles refused to see his physicians. His mind was constantly running on financial affairs, and he overslept or overate. He left the resort over the affairs of his office. He was never more cheerful at his desk. He seemed to have the working habit so fixed that he could not break himself of it or allow himself an idle moment.

Castles came from New Orleans about six years ago to be president of the Guaranty Trust Company. In New Orleans he had been president of the Southern National Bank, where his ability attracted the attention of New York financiers. On January 1st, last, Mr. Castles left the Guaranty Trust Company to become president of the Union Trust Company. It was about this time that his nervous condition began to manifest itself.

Burton S. Castles, a brother, persuaded him to stay. The physician's nurse, Mrs. Castles, her son, John W., Jr., and a daughter, both in their teens, are having home from the Adirondack League Club, Little Moose Lake, Herkimer County, N. Y.

BABIES PRAY LOST MOTHER WILL RETURN

ORANGE, Sept. 14.—"Mamma, please come home. We miss you, oh, we miss you mamma. Every night we pray you will come back to us so we can be happy like we were before you went away."

This is the appeal that three bright little children unite in making to their mother, Mrs. May Newell, who left them on February 12 and has not been heard or seen since.

The three children are William, age twelve, Hazel, ten, and Millie, age eight. They live in a house on South avenue. Hazel is keeping house for her father and is trying hard to take the place left vacant by her mother.

"My wife would sway last February," said Mr. Newell. "I do not know why. We were very happy and never had a quarrel. She left a note saying that she was going away and telling me not to look for her because she was all right and would return in due time.

"I do not think that my wife has met with foul play, but I think she has been enticed away. I do not want the police to interfere for I think who will come back when she gets ready."

"We miss mamma very much," says little Millie, "but papa says she will soon be home again. Every night Hazel, Willie and I pray to have her come back to us."

FALLS FROM STAGING.

U. S. EAGLE IS SCREAMING FOR WOMEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The United Ladies' Tailors' Association, which has just opened its convention in the Masonic Temple, is making the American Eagle scream.

Here's a shriek or two, condensed in pamphlet form, that is pressed into each visitor's hands.

"The opening of this exhibition is a Declaration of Independence by American tailors. It proclaims a genuine revolution in the fashions for ladies' dresses. After all these years of abject slavery to a foreign prestige we have been aroused to a spirit of independence. We are making one grand effort to relieve ourselves of the burden under which we have been laboring for so long, of subjecting ourselves and our methods to the dictation of foreign tailors. We believe that the foreign models will soon become a thing of the past, and that the fashion plates—our American style, pure and simple—will take the place belonging to them by right."

How-ray! And a yoo-rah! Let yoicks the doorway without knowing that fair Columbia is the patron saint of the show—for there she is beaming down upon you and your fellow men from a green of red and white striped broadcloth, the robe a blue that is studded with 45 white stars. The bird o' freedom—four inches wide—spreads its wings over the dress and even her smart little hat is wound with tri-color ribbon.

"Every lady who comes gets a simply isn't in it with some of the other new models shown for the first time yesterday, and discovered by the staff of Ikkelbergers, a New York exhibitor.

"It's originality," quoth Herr Kleinberger, "that is what we are striving for. We seek not the trite and effete styles of Paris and London. The condition surrounding American society life are quite different from those prevailing in Europe, and these conditions are known to and recognized by the American tailor. So his work is designed to meet them, to blend his effects in such a way that they will be in true harmony with surroundings. No European tailor can do this because he is lacking in the local knowledge required for such a course."

THEY HELPED HER TO FIND HEALTH

A Maine Woman Tells What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Will Do for Her Sex.

Neglect or improper treatment of woman's ills almost inevitably leads to a train of unfortunate results and frequently to a hopeless invalid. In time almost every organ of the body becomes affected, the nervous system is broken down, the digestion is weakened and symptoms of kidney trouble develop.

Women who become pale and lose weight and ambition and are subject to headaches and backaches need such a tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are especially adapted for girls and women of all ages and give just the aid required to bring back health and strength to the nervous and exhausted.

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for women is illustrated in the experience of Miss Florence A. Jordan, of No. 90 Perham street, Farmington, Me. She says:

"A cold brought on trouble to which my sex is subject and for two years I suffered without relief until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was very irregular and at intervals suffered so that I was obliged to stay in bed. My blood seemed to congeal and my body was covered with purple spots, my heart fluttered, slight exertion tired me. I was pale and my strength and ambition were gone. Sometimes my feet swelled so that I could not keep on my shoes.

"After consulting several doctors and finding myself no better I decided that another physician advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He said they had helped his daughter who suffered the same way and I made up my supply. Two boxes brought about the desired results and a few more restored me to complete health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The pills are guaranteed to be safe and absolutely harmless to remain in the tenderest constitution. They contain no morphine, opiate, narcotic nor anything to cause a drug habit.

A booklet, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free to any woman suffering from weakness. It explains fully why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are suited to the needs of weak women of all ages.

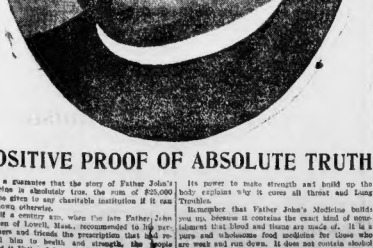
POSITIVE PROOF OF ABSOLUTE TRUTH



As a Guarantee that the story of Father John's Medicine is absolutely true, the sum of $25,000 will be given to any charitable institution if it can be shown otherwise.

Half a century ago, when the late Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., recommended to his parishioners and friends the prescription that had restored him to health and strength, the people named it Father John's Medicine.

Its power to make strength and build up the body explains why it cures all throat and Lung Troubles.

Remember that Father John's Medicine builds you up, because it contains the exact kind of nourishment that blood and tissue are made of. It is a pure and wholesome food medicine for those who are weak and run down. It does not contain alcohol or dangerous drugs.

NEW DISEASE IS ALARMING GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 14—Officials of the United States public health and marine hospital service are preparing to investigate pellagra, the strange disease, which is becoming more prevalent each day throughout the United States, especially so in the southern States.

Pellagra primarily is a skin disease and supposed to be due to eating musty corn. Not alone in the South, however, has the disease made its appearance recently. Fifty cases have been reported to exist in the North. Dr. State Hospital. Captain Joseph H. Siler of the Army Medical Corps, has been dispatched there from Washington to observe the cases and make a report on the characteristics of the disease.

Mississippi will possibly pass a law prohibiting for eight months the shipping into the State, if the investigation shows the correctness of the Italian theory that pellagra comes from eating musty corn. It has been noted as a coincidence that pellagra made its appearance in Mississippi with the arrival in agricultural districts of immigrants from Italy where the disease has been known for a thousand years.

In Italy opinion is divided as to how it originated. In Lombardy, where pellagra is especially common, the disease is called, "Lombardy leprosy." It has some of the characteristics of true Asiatic leprosy but quickly kills its victims, while leprous patients may linger for years.

AUTO SUCCESSFUL IN FIGHTING FIRE?

Whether or not autos for fire fighters are a success or advisable, will be the principal question dealt with at the thirtieth convention of the Massachusetts State Firemen's Association which opens at Plymouth to-morrow.

The cost of auto maintenance, and its efficiency as compared with horse drawn fire apparatus, also will be discussed. Samuel Abbott, Superintendent of the Boston Protective Department, and A. H. Strong, Captain of Hose No. 5 of Springfield, will explain the workings of the auto apparatus by their cities.

FOUR INJURED IN TENEMENT FIRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—Four firemen were injured, ten persons were overcome by smoke and several were rescued from death to-day during a fire in the four-story tenement house at No. 65 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn. The firemen who were injured are members of engine company No. 73.

Policeman Gallagher also was the hero of the fire. He made several trips into the burning buildings and only stopped when he was too weak from inhaling smoke to continue longer.

STYLE CHANGED FOR THOSE WHO WALTZ

Hereafter it will be de rigueur for a gentleman waltzing with a lady to place his hand, palm down, over hers, palm up. This is a reversal of the style which has obtained until now. It was decided upon after grave deliberation, by the committee of the New England members of the American National Masters of Dancing Association, at Lynn. The purpose of the change is simply to furnish variety, as it was explained by those who were present. There are now new dances for this season, among them the Lynn, the Malinda, the La Senorita and the Waldorf waltz.

SEND MONEY TO WOMEN STRIKERS

Two hundred dollars was received by the striking Ladies' Tailors and Dressmakers' Union of Boston to-day from the local Cloak and Skirtmakers' Union, which is aiding in carrying on the fifteen-week strike still being waged against the open shop order of the employers' association. This is the second time within two weeks that the cloak makers have voted money out of their union treasury to assist the strikers, the previous donation being $1000. Miss Pauline Newman, international representative of the strikers' union, stated to-day that still other labor organizations of labor had promised to help the 700 striking ladies' tailors and dressmakers.

LYNN AS DUMPING GROUND FOR 'JAGS'

The Lynn No-License League says the police of Salem are using Lynn as a dumping ground for Salem drunks and that Mayor James E. Rich and the Lynn City Council to do something about it. Mayor Hurley of Salem, on the other hand, declares neither he nor his police have been railroading drunks into Lynn. He says further and declares that there are no real drunks in Salem, anyhow, saying: "I don't remember ever having seen a man in Salem who couldn't walk unaided himself. In fact Salem practice, either, to help aboard Lynn trains any man who might be thought to be drunk."

NO SCHOOL FOR 50 CHILDREN

Although the Boston schools have been open one week, there are still many children on the streets, as no room can be found for them. This is particularly true in the Wendell Phillips district in the West End. At this school Ellis Mattson, master of the district, has been obliged to turn away each morning about fifty boys who are under fourteen years of age.

The parents of these children are talking of holding an indignation meeting and the appointing of a committee to wait on Mayor Hibbard to find out why there is so much delay in seating boys who really want to go to school.

The new trade school for girls on Massachusetts avenue will probably be opened to-morrow morning at 8:30. Headmaster Weaver of the Girls' High & Normal & Practical Arts, who is temporarily in charge of the new school, held a meeting with the teachers yesterday afternoon and laid out the courses. Provision has been made for about 250 girls. The fees will be for one year at present, although a girl can stay for another year if she wants to.

Nearly 400 girls are registered at the Girls' High School of Practical Arts. Of this number about fifty have been sent to the Lyceum Hall building on Meeting House Hill, Dorchester.

YANKEE SCIENTISTS EATEN BY TIGERS?

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 14.—A special cablegram from Port Limon, Costa Rica, says: Twenty days ago two naturalists, William Johns, an American, and R. Gentzlech, a Swede, left to explore the mountains of Turrial basin in search of Indian relics, agreeing to return in ten days. At the end of this period the people started out in search of them. Three days afterward the last of one man and the clothes of the other were found. Tracks of several tigers were discovered near the place. Where the articles were found and it is believed the men have been attacked by ferocious wild animals. Two large tigers have been seen frequently in that locality.

CALLS DOCTOR DRINK VICTIM

A divorce suit, alleging confirmed habits of intoxication, has been filed against Dr. Harry P. Ewing by Kathryn Ewing of Winthrop. It will probably come up for a hearing at the ensuing term of court.

Dr. Ewing was once a prominent medical practitioner in this city, and previous to locating here was for several years a member of the staff of consulting surgeons of Bellevue Hospital, New York.

Until recently Mrs. Ewing has been living in a suite at Blackwood street, Back Bay. Two months ago she closed up her home and went to Winthrop for the remainder of the Summer with her only child, a handsome girl of sixteen years, who has been attending the Girls' Latin School.

Mrs. Ewing is about thirty-five years old. She has taken back her maiden name and resumed. The case, it is believed, will be uncontested as Dr. Ewing disappeared from this city several months ago and is now thought to be in New York.

Mrs. Ewing will probably come to Boston and for a while Dr. Ewing managed to be fairly successful in the head of a medical dispensary at the North End. He was finally haled into court for intoxication and sentenced to the House of Correction several months ago by Judge De Courcy. Counsel for the doctor endeavored to have the case placed on file, but Judge De Courcy was obdurate when the man's history was aired.

RABBI ASKS THREE DAYS OFF FOR JEWS

Rabbi W. Margolis, chief rabbi of the Boston district, addresses an appeal to all employers of labor to grant leave of absence to Jewish employes on Thursday and Friday of this week, that they may properly observe the feast of Rosh Hashonah, or the Jewish New Year. Rabbi Margolis explains that Jews are required in their religion to refrain from labor during the two days of the feast. He says that in the past few years many Jews have lost their places for conscientiously following the dictates of their religion.

PRINTERS ASK HIGHER WAGE

A wage scale conference between representatives of the Typothetae of Boston and Typographical Union No. 13 will be held at the Quincy House to-morrow evening, to consider the union's request for an increase in the wages paid printers employed in these lines of work in the city.

The union scale for job printers now is $18 for a 48-hour week. If the union contends, should be increased although the exact increase desired is not actually determined yet. Almost all book men and women are affected by the demand, the greater number of whom are members of the union.

Norman E. McPhail, President of Typographical Union No. 13, will chairman of the joint committee, and state that he hopes to adjust the new scale without any suspension of work.

ARMED DEPUTIES TO QUELL RIOTERS

ORANGE, Sept. 14—Putting an end to a week among the striking workmen, the fancy machine at work yesterday, a large power house and dam for the Athol Electric Company, and a force of deputies in charge of Chief of Police Richard C. Fowler left for there to-day. The strike was declared yesterday, because the men were dissatisfied with the superintendency of Saunders. Matters came to a crisis yesterday afternoon, when A. W. Hubbard, manager of the company, discharged Saunders, attempted to unload a coal car. The striking workmen decided against all the men and threatened to shoot unless they left the place. The police men sought shelter in an office from the mob.

LANGFORD'S LAST DAY OF HARD WORK

NORTHBORO, Mass., Sept. 14—Sam Langford, who is billed to go ten rounds with Stanley Ketchel at the Fairmont Club, New York, on Friday night, pearly early wound up his training for the bout today. He will do no more hard work.

Langford did eight miles on the road this morning and weighed 160½ pounds when he stripped to quarters. He boxed twelve rounds with George Byers, Pete Harris of Philadelphia and Joe Gorman, the 115-pound amateur. Gorman was taken on to improve Langford's speed.

There was an hour's gymnasium work skipping the rope, punching the bag, shadow boxing and so on. Langford declared that he is in the best condition of his life. He will go to New York on the Fall River boat on Thursday night.

NO NEW RECORD FOR GIBSON, SAYS M'GUIRE

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 14—Jim McGuire, new manager of the Cleveland team, refused the claims of Catcher Gibson of Pittsburg, that his feat of catching 115 straight games this year was a new world's record. McGuire allows he beat that mark not fourteen years ago when with Washington. Said Jim:

"Far be it from a veteran like me to try to take any credit from a nice young fellow like Gibson, but a reference to the National League records of 1895 will disclose the fact that in that year I caught 153 games for the Washington Club, which was all there were on the schedule. The games were necessarily consecutive.

"Gibson deserves plenty of credit for his performance; I'm not even disposed to try to belittle the great performance of Chief Zimmer, who once caught 141 games in a row. But I do feel that as long as I'm connected with the game in some way or other they might not to try to make any new records, just to observe one that cost me considerable effort and of which I have always been particularly proud.

Baseball News and Notes

Sam Crane says that he never saw a second baseman on record for Connie Mack next season. And more to do what he did should discover a pennant pole without difficulty.

* * *

Dick Rudolph, the former Pittsburg football star, has an ambition to beat Wagner for premier batting among National League players.

* * *

Perhaps the question as to which team had the best of the Bobby Byrne deal can be answered when Manager Fred Clarke of the Pirates and Manager Frank Chance check stubs and carefully noting the Pirate attendance.

* * *

You can't tell when those Cubs are bushed. Just as they come from behind in single games and win from behind in double games, they have a bad of another team every once in the running until the pennant comes in the middle of October.

* * *

Thanks to Jennings's recent deals the Detroit champions are a stronger team on the inside than they were last year. Once Coughlin gets going good and is no doubt fortunate for him that such is the case, the rest of the staff has shown enough to make a championship team work.

CYCLONE BURNS AFTER THE POLE

Ignaty Poliusky, the Polish wrestler, will have a chance to make good his boasts tomorrow evening when he and "Cyclone" Burns face each other on the mat at the Columbia Theatre. Poliusky, ever since his contest with Lundin a few weeks ago, has been going around with a chip on his shoulder claiming that he can defeat any man in New England in the catch-as-catch-can game. His challenge, which was issued so defiantly did not fall on deaf ears, for "Cyclone" jumped at the proposition and is willing to bet anything from a Lincoln penny to a house and lot that not alone will he stand off the burly Pole but he will go in and lick him in any style.

The wild antics of the Polish gentleman will not have the effect of throwing a scare into the local boy and by the time the comparties of Koschisko gets through with the bout he will know that he has been up against something harder than cider.

"Cyclone" is one of the most dangerous grapplers in the game and fooled some of the wisest ones. His bout with Perelli last season is one of the biggest upsets of the year. He is stronger than ever this season and will put up a bout to please the public that no lover of the game should miss.

NEW TEAM WANTS GAMES.

A newly organized baseball nine in Malden would like to hear from fast semi-professional or strong amateur teams for games to be played in Maldeu until the last of October. Team composed of all first men, the pick of our local high. Manager T. F. Kenney, Malden News, Malden, Mass. Telephone 65 Malden.

BIG UMP FOR NATIONAL.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 14.—William Brannan, who this season umpired in the Wisconsin-Illinois League, quit that league Saturday night to join the National League corps of arbiters. Brannan last night left for New York, where he will report for work Tuesday. He is a giant, standing six feet three inches.

MAY CALL OFF JOHNSON AND KETCHEL BOUT

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14—The Johnson-Ketchel match is in a bad shape, and it could not well be otherwise in view of the way the Ketchel crowd of it has been bungled. Jack Johnson has refused to grant the postponement asked by Willus Britt, and as a consequence Jim Coffroth has issued an ultimatum which practically cancels the match.

Coffroth says that unless Ketchel is back in San Francisco to begin training on September 21 he will wash his hands of the October fight. Ketchel is booked to box Sam Langford in New York Friday night and as he is not likely to forego this engagement, it is a physical impossibility for Ketchel to be in San Francisco on the date named by Coffroth.

The affair with Johnson is the biggest thing Ketchel ever had on his hands," said Coffroth, "and unless he has matters well clear of training I do not see how I can arrange public interest in it. I don't like the way Britt has acted in this matter. I think he should have allowed his match with Langford to remain outside until after he settled with Johnson, who is chameleon of all champions. I feel that it would be a bad speculation for me to promote a Johnson-Ketchel fight unless both men were at work in their training camps at least three weeks before the date of the match."

RUSHING ENTRIES FOR MUNSEY CONTEST

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 14.—The various automobile manufacturers, dealers and private owners who have entered cars in the Frank A. Munsey Reliability contest from Washington to Boston and return September 24-28, are now engaged in sending their entries to the capital city either by road, rail or water. The cars competing in the four mile tour from Washington to Boston on September 18, at which time they will be weighed and then turned over to the technical committee for the preliminary examination provided for by the rules.

An inspection card will be filled out showing the condition of the various parts of each car, which card must be attested to by the entrant's representative. In addition to this certain measurements of the car will be taken and recorded.

HARVARD IS WEAK IN PUNTERS

SOLDIERS' FIELD, Cambridge, Sept. 14—Not in years have so few candidates shown for football practice at Harvard as this season, only forty-five putting in an appearance this forenoon, including four new men. Coach Haughton is alarmed over the condition of affairs, and last night he sent telegrams all over the country dematching the return of football candidates.

The new men reporting today were Marvin, a guard on last year's second team; Merrill, tackle on last year's second team; Dunlap, substitute tackle on last year's varsity team, and Schlei, who has not played before, but of whom much is expected, he being a heavy man and eager to make good on the line.

Captain Fish had supervision of the practice this forenoon. Outside of a few long rangle few plays the most of the time was taken in building up the punting department. Harvard is very weak in punting, and present indications are that the Dore and Bent and Kennard will be difficult in filling.

Sprague, who played first year in the final half of the Yale game at center, is being worked with the hope of developing into a punter, but through injury to his knee last season, which has refused to entirely mend, too much can not be expected of him. Notice has been posted that beginning today the candidates will have two-hour sessions at practice, in the forenoon and again in the afternoon.

CONWAY TO PITCH AGAINST THE DOVES

Kid Conway, the star utility paw of the Lynn team of the New England League, will pitch against the Boston Doves in an exhibition game at Ocean Park, Lynn, tomorrow afternoon. Conway has been drafted by the Braves and Manager Dunn is anxious to see him work. Conway will probably be the only Lynn man who will start the game, as Outrey, who played first base part of the season with the Lynn team, will be given a warm reception and a large crowd of fans will turn out and root for Conway in hopes of his downfall.

TERRY HAS A BROTHER WHO IS A WINNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Philly McGovern, a brother of Terry, won all the way from Joe Wagner in a ten-round bout at the Bedford Club of Brooklyn. McGovern was too strong and too speedy for his rival for bantamweight honors. In fact, Wagner was thoroughly outclassed. The general verdict was that McGovern never fought in better style.

McGovern led in every round except in the ninth, in which Wagner made a game effort to redeem himself by carrying the fighting to Philly.

Wagner tried his famous left shift again and again, but he only landed it once, and that was in the ninth round. He was too slow for the agile McGovern. McGovern would get inside his left shifts with short rights and lefts. He dazed Wagner, but never succeeded in knocking him down.

In the third round McGovern started Wagner bleeding about the left eye and had the eye almost closed in the fourth round. At the end of the sixth round Wagner was a very sad-looking young man with both eyes cut and nearly closed. In the clinches McGovern made Wagner grunt with pain.

All during the fight McGovern was chasing Wagner and frequently held him on the ropes. The last round was gloriously fought but both finished strong. There was a big turnout to see the battle, and the crowd directed much amusement at an unfortunate rooster decorated with green ribbons which seemed to be the chief second in Philly McGovern's corner.

LOWELL RACES WILL REMAIN A FIXTURE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The manner in which the grand stand and other temporary buildings along the Merrimac Valley course are being demolished speaks volumes for the efficiency of the workmen. It seems rather unfortunate that such structures as the grand and press stands on the straightaway at Lowell have to be demolished, and could not be permitted to remain in position from year to year, especially as there is every indication that the Lowell carnival will remain a feature in the motoring annals of the country. Lowell has twice demonstrated her ability to hold excellent and satisfactory motoring contests, and judging from the way in which all of the natives took upon the city there is no reason to believe but that Lowell can have a tournament any old year she desires.

If some public spirited citizen of Lowell would offer a valuable and handsome trophy for a stock chassis race next year and give that trophy in keeping to the Lowell Automobile Association, another good race would be assured. The Lowell course is as suitable for motoring racing, and more satisfactory to the spectators, than is the far famed Long Island course. A race there will always prove attractive.

The pontoon bridge, which was constructed at a cost of $6,000, is being demolished so that navigation on the Merrimac at that point shall not be interfered with. By many it is believed that the pontoon bridge is but the predecessor of a permanent bridge at this point, the belief being that one is greatly needed.

Besides demolishing the temporary structures that have caused to be erected over the course the Lowell Automobile Club is making a thorough overhauling of the course itself, repairing the soft spots here and there, and when the work is over Lowell and Tewksbury will have better roads than ever. Prior to the race there was no end of work for the officials of the club, and since the carnival they have been fully as busy getting things back into the regular channels and hope within a few days to be able to give some attention to their individual business.

* * *

No less than thirty three cars are entered in the endurance run from Washington to Boston and return, starting on September 21. Considerable interest is attached to this tour owing to its being the first contest that will be run under the 1910 rules recently adopted by the A. A. A.

Under these rules a fixed penalization schedule will be used, a fact that has been strongly commended by all the factories that have entered cars in the Munsey tour. Another departure from the old order of things is the consigning of the cars from cheapest to dividend, ranging from division 1, for cars costing $850 and under, to Division 6, for cars listing at $4,000 and over. Division 1 cars will be started first, followed in rotation by the other divisions. Cars in Division 4, 5 and 6 will average seventy miles an hour; those in Division 3 and 2, eighteen miles, and those in Division 1, sixteen miles. The new rules are very comprehensive and embrace a number of different paragraphs.

Handsome trophies will be awarded the winning car in each division, in addition to which there will be a grand sweepstakes prize to be awarded the car making the best mechanical and road record. In addition to these awards, the entrance money will be divided among the drivers of the winning cars in each division.

CAMPBELL'S COLTS GOT BLUE RIBBONS

C. A. Campbell of Ipswich took the stallion Alcazia, son of Alcander, 2:30, to the New England Fair at Worcester, together with three of the stallion's get to exhibit in the show ring. In the heel class Alcalzy won the blue ribbon against a strong showing. In the yearling class the filly Juva II. won the blue ribbon, while in the two-year-old class Mr. Campbell's entries captured the red and yellow rosettes respectively with Juvel and The Kinsman.

NEW REFEREE FOR ATTELL-O'TOOLE BOUT

Expecting a hard tussle tonight, Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, has trained hard for his bout with Young O'Toole, the stocky Quaker, at the Armory A. A.

The Hebrew is wise to the fact that O'Toole will be harder to subdue in twelve rounds than in six, the distance they met once before, and O'Toole was given credit of beating Abey.

A feature which will be well received by the members is doing away with managing judges and the appointing of a referee who will render satisfactory decisions. Dick Fleming, who has had much experience in Chelsea and down on the North Shore, is the third man in the ring and will be responsible for all decisions.

O'Toole knowing that this chance is one in a life time has put in some hard licks in training, as it is not often Abey will give the tough boys a chance at his title in a bout over six rounds, and O'Toole was aware of this, he has prepared himself especially to give Abey a lacing if he wins within his power.

There will be three six-round preliminaries. Eddie Burns of Revere will meet Joe Connors of Charlestown; Jack O'Donnell of Brooklyn will face Young Sullivan of the South End, while in the semi-final Young Montell of Pawtucket will box Eddie Sherlin, the promising lad from Roxbury.

weight battle for his title when Abe Hall hooks up with Tommy O'Toole in a twelve-round bout. While Abe is not going to lose his title or come anywhere near it he is going to be a rattling good bout and as well worth seeing. By the way, this lanky Celt usually puts on a show that is worth seeing and after watching the bills of all the clubs in the country, I fail to see where any of them are up to the local standard.

ONE OF THE PRELIMINARIES IS going to be watched with a great deal of interest. Eddie Sherlin is one of the most popular boys that ever boxed at the Armory and many of those who have seen him at work predict great things for him. Tonight he meets Young Mantell, and while I don't know anything about the latter boy, I am willing to make a six-bit wager that the bout does not last the full six rounds.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Coconut butter would probably answer the purpose, although most of the swimmers use vaseline.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Straighten this out for a couple of suits and make them feel as if they are the classy stuff. New York.

A and B are bowling duck pins and have a match game with five nine pins each. Strings are even.

A wins the first string. In the second string, in the tenth he has knocked down nine pins with the first ball. C jumps on and wants to bet B that he does not knock the other one to make a score of seven money. This was said a couple of times. Now, what is the decision to it? Is it wrong in getting up on the tenth ball and betting that he can do it? Is it a betting game to do such a thing. Now let me hear your decision.

STEVEN THORNS.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 9, 1909.

I wouldn't go so far as to say C was not a gentleman, but his actions were certainly very unladylike, and he should be chided gently with a board. If there is no lumber pile at hand, one of the duck pins might answer the purpose. Or better yet,

ATHLETIC FEUD OVER AT LAST

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 14.—The fierce athletic feud of two years' standing between the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union and the Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada is at last at an end. From the rival organizations this has formed a new organization, to be known as the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, as the result of a session, just ended in this city, between authorized representatives of the two former organizations.

For a time it looked as though the delegates from the two bodies could not agree regarding the concessions it was proposed to make in the case of cricket, lacrosse and golf players, but it was finally voted that an amateur athlete should not lose his amateur status by competing with or against a professional in cricket or golf. Special permission upon application will be given amateurs to play with or against professionals in cycling, motor lacrosse series of the National Lacrosse Union until such time as the board of governors shall unanimously decide that professionalism can be satisfactorily established in the senior series of that game. It was also voted to make concessions for one year to amateurs who wish to play with or against professional hockey players, with the suggestion that every assistance be given by the International Amateur Hockey League to establish amateur hockey upon a solid basis.

The Story of a Success

Entering on our thirty-seventh year in business, we are going to point out to you a few of the reasons why we have been able to successfully weather the various periods of financial stress that have laid so many former competitors of ours by the heels.

Away back in 1873, when we first began our business in a modest manner, the prices ordinarily charged by the trade ranged from $15 to $25 a suit.

At that time we believed that there was a field for custom made garments at $25, and we began making them at that figure. Our success was phenomenal and a few years later we were forced to seek larger quarters.

Improving and bringing our organization up to the highest point of efficiency, we were able to gradually lessen prices until during the Cleveland administration, when a reduced tariff went into effect, we were enabled to finally produce a first-class custom suit at $15.50.

Today with woolen prices greatly increased—with a heavily increased wage scale for skilled workers, we offer our custom suits and overcoats at $20 to $35. THESE ARE THE LOWEST PRICES AT WHICH THEY CAN POSSIBLY BE PRODUCED. If anybody could make them at a lower price, WE CERTAINLY COULD.

In our suits and overcoats at $20 we guarantee a journeyman-made coat throughout.

The coat has hand felled edge stays—hand padded collar and lapels—hand worked button holes—a flexible hand made coat front that positively will not break or curl and A COLLAR THAT WILL ALWAYS HUG THE NECK.

Remember that in our garments at $20 we set a style pace that others find it difficult to follow at $30.

It's So Different in Your Own Case

THE pretty girl with the rose ribbon twisted through her hair readjusted the lamp shade so the glare would not show the powder on her face and smiled sweetly on the young man who was sitting beside her.

"I'm glad of one thing," she told him. "It is that I'm not jealous. Not in the least! Why, we've been engaged two days and I haven't even once asked you whether you ever thought you were in love with any other girls! Do you realize that?"

"Indeed I do!" said the young man, fervently. "You're a wonder!"

"H'm!" said the pretty girl. "You talk as if you had been engaged a lot of times and knew all about it. As if I were an expert on or something! Have you been engaged before, Clarence?"

"Why, Cecilia!" said the young man, in a grieved tone. "What a question! How can you think——"

"Clarence," broke in the pretty girl, sitting up very straight and patting her hair with an air of indifference, "don't try to deceive me! You have been engaged before, and you are trying to conceal it from me! I never should have thought it of you! I suppose she jilted you, and—and you are just confiding yourself with me and don't really believe me a bit!"

A Boy and Girl Affair

"Now, Cecilia," said the young man, getting hold of one of her hands, "don't be foolish! It didn't amount to a thing! Why, I was in college and too young to know any better, and I sort of drifted into it—and it was just a boy and girl affair, anyway!"

"Well, you thought you were in love with her," insisted the pretty girl, "and that's just as bad as if you had been. Why, if you hadn't quarreled you might be married to her this minute—and I——"

"Never!" protested the young man, valiantly. "Milly was a nice girl, but I never really cared for her as I do for you. Of course, at the time I thought she was splendid. You see, I can tell you all this because you aren't foolishly jealous, as most girls would be."

"What kind of hair did she have?" demanded the pretty girl, uncompromisingly. "Were her eyes blue or brown?"

"Her Hair Was Lighter"

"Gray," said the young man promptly. "I never saw eyes like them. Her hair was yellowish—lighter than yours."

The pretty girl was playing feverishly with a paper cutter and not looking at him.

"Tall or short?" she asked.

"Medium," said the young man.

"Just right, I suppose," commented the pretty girl, in a strained voice.

"And how she could dance!" continued the young man, reminiscently.

"What did you quarrel about?"

"We didn't quarrel," said the young man, comfortably. "She just got tired of me and married another man."

"Then I suppose," said the pretty girl in a trembling voice, "that you are glad just because you had to! And mourned for her for years. Oh, it's lots worse than if you'd—if you had been in love with a dozen! You've deceived me, Clarence!"

The young man stuck his hands into his pockets and straightened out his feet before him and frowned at them.

"I don't see why you act this way," he said. "It isn't as if you were jealous. Why should poor Milly bother you? It's all of ten years ago!"

"And you've remembered her all this time!" said the pretty girl, accusingly. "If—if there'd been a lot of girls you'd have forgotten them all. You'll never forget her, never! She'll be a bright dream to you when I—I'm old and wrinkled and have to wear false hair. I can't stand it, Clarence!"

"Would you feel any better about it," asked the young man, with a sudden inspiration, "if there had been—that is, if she wasn't the only one?"

"Tell me at once, Clarence," commanded the pretty girl, drying her tears. "At once! I want to know the worst!"

A Different Case

"I don't understand you at all, Cecilia," said the young man. "At first you made a row because there was only one girl in my past, and now you seem to object if there's being more than one! I thought there was safety in numbers!"

"Who was there besides Milly?" demanded the pretty girl, fiercely.

The young man made a gesture of despair. "There was Katherine and Louise and Marie and—oh, about a dozen. You might just as well know! But I wasn't really in love with any of them. Not as I am with you—for keeps!"

"But I can never be sure," wailed the pretty girl.

"Yes," you can," said the young man, with another inspiration. "How about the dozen or so fellows you've kept dangling after you till you met me? How about them?"

The pretty girl meditated, then tossed her head.

"That's different," she said. "It isn't the same thing at all. Now, begin and tell me about the girl who were jealous Milly! You've got to tell me about them all!"

That Precocious Infant.

Little Ralph, an only child of four, had been permitted to stay up one evening when his parents had company. At the table he made a quaint remark, at which all the guests laughed. He instantly saw that he had made a hit, and with commendable enterprise sought to follow it up.

"Dad," he shouted, "what was that other smart thing I said yesterday?"

"Did you ever gamble, ma?"

"Only once, my son."

"And when was that?"

"When I married your father."

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGH GRADE TEAS & COFFEES

"The Same Old Moon" By Nell Brinkley

And the same old moon is with us all the years, and it knows our sorrows and our joys, but not always does it seem to us the moon of other days

"Painted Diana, can that be The moon of other days?"

Till same old silver moon!

And you lift your eyes that are different now up to her serene, tarnished face as it rides above the tree tops into the open sea of the dark sky, and you wonder—you wonder how it is the moon shines on and on, never dimmer, never older, unruffled by the war of life she sails over year by year, watching those blooms out of Paradise and watching them fight their butterfly lives and go back again into the dark under the years that shade the river Styx.

Are they only butterfly lives to her? They must be—or her face would have gone black and turned into a cinder long ago with woe at the passing things below.

Only millions of millions of butterflies, I reckon, coming after each other through millions of Summers. Only that!

She rode just there in harvest time, over that same hay field, big and golden and blank, when you squeezed in the crotch of the silver leaf maple above the garden and watched with your eyes, near as big as she, through your short, black bangs.

You whistled in little choppy, keen notes with two fingers between your stretched lips.

And the little tom-boy, with her soft toes and hands clutching the rough fork above you, stared at the mystery of the sky and the moon and made a little story about it.

The clouds were the land, peninsulas and islands and isthmuses, and the dark, deep blue sky around was an ocean, and the faraway, winking stars were cities and ships—and—and on the end of a rocky little cloud in a rocky bay was a tiny star that winked, and the tom-boy shouted that it was a lighthouse.

And the moon, "the moon," she whispered, "is no gold ship, Billy, that all our heroes sail in, Robinson Crusoe and Sigurd, Billy, and Prince Charlie, and the Tinker that got ahead of the Bad Man, all of 'em are dead—and—and yet ain't dead, Billy."

And she stared on through the cropped light of her hair and clawed her poor little mosquito bites on her little bare calves. And the frogs boomed from the pond and the aster heads stood hushed under the mellow moon.

Moon—moon—the big solemn moon, she stared at you with her golden eye when you hadn't any other thing to think of than stories about the sky and heroes, and no sudden troubles than sheeter bites.

And then—and then—she rode in that same place—up out of the harvest field—above the booming of the frogs and the aster heads, in the same silence, with the same gold eye growing paler and paler till it turned silver as she climbed, and her light dripped in through the leaves of the old flower urn that crowned one corner of the stone garden seat.

You were in the shadow, but it flooded the cloudy, voluminous white girl's frock that flowed out of your folded arms and over the bench to the dark grass below, and made a golden mist of her piled up hair.

The little tom-boy was a smooth, tall maiden now with her first long frock, and your ring, like a star out of your storied sky, winking on her hand, and she patted your dark face as it pressed on her shoulder, and looked at the solemn moon that gave no sign that it knew her bright low-head.

And you, with your black bangs pasted back from a man's forehead whispered another story against her sleeve, about love and loving and the sweetness of it.

And the moon, big moon, stared down at you with her yellow eye when you had love to think about and each other, and no "badder" troubles than the few tears youth knows and how many pantries your home should have!

The same moon! But you were different and the old flower urn was cracking.

And then—and then—the same rich moon slips now up out of the singing harvest fields, above the booming of the frogs and the hushed, ghostly aster heads, with the same unruffled fulness, sober and gold, giving no sign that she remembers, flooding down through the leaves of the hoary old silver maple, searching out the old stone bench and the jagged place where the flower urn stood.

The crack deepened and it fell a long time ago.

The moon finds it now grown into the sod.

And it finds the silver on your ancient head and glints in your dimming eyes and slants on the thin-spun ivory of the tom-boy's head, where it sags peacefully against your shoulder.

And you lift your eyes and remember the tears and the years and the deep love that followed through, and wonder if the moon, the same big moon, remembers!

But her big eye makes no sign.

"Painted Diana," you whisper into the tom-boy's withered cheek, "can that be the moon of other days?"

"Story of the Thrilling French Drama, "Arsene Lupine," Now Being Presented in This Country By Charles Frohman.

By JOSEPH O'BRIEN.

Chapter XI.

IT was not alone because of his desire to prolong his pleasurable triumph that Guerchard deferred the arrest of Lupin. The capture of the world-famous thief would bring him glory, but if he could restore to the rightful owners the millions of francs in treasure which Lupin had taken riches might be added to his renown. He was there to try to make a bargain, and Lupin's love for Sonia gave him the nearer's end.

"I know where Sonia Kritchenoff is," he said after a pause, during which he studied his adversary intently.

Lupin became serious in an instant. The sparkle of amusement went out of his eyes and left there a gleam of determination to fight if necessary for the girl he loved. Guerchard went on.

"Victorie is under arrest down stairs. Sonia Kritchenoff is in a little roadhouse and I have her telephone number. Would you like to call her up?"

"Guerchard, you won't harm her, will you?" Lupin said, earnestly. "You can't do so—you're a policeman. She is innocent, and you won't arrest her, will you? I, who me you wanted. You've got me now. Do what you like with me, but don't harm her. Poor little girl! You can not, you won't."

Guerchard's Offer.

Guerchard took a turn around the room and stopped before Lupin again.

"I am going to make a bargain with you," he said.

"A bargain? What do you offer?"

"Nothing."

"Then you are sincere." Lupin laughed. "I offer you freedom for Victorie and Sonia Kritchenoff."

"This is some trick, surely. You are the stronger just now. I am in your hands. You offer Sonia complete freedom? How will you manage it?"

"I will put her thefts on you."

"My back is broad enough," Lupin laughed. "But what do you want in exchange?"

Guerchard stood with one foot resting on a little stool beside the table and enumerated his demands.

"You will return everything—the tiara, the Marlibes, the Rembrandts, all the pictures you stole and the certificate of the death of the Duke of Charmerace."

At this sweeping order Lupin laughed merrily.

"Is that all" he asked. "Don't you want my skin?"

"Bones and carcass," Guerchard said grimly. "What will you give for Sonia's freedom?"

"I will give you—let me see—I will give you a glass of port," he replied with sudden inspiration.

"Very well," Guerchard snarled, "the girl will be sent to jail. You know the law. The minimum is five years."

"But even if I should accept your terms, what good would it do?" Lupin asked with a return to his old humor. "I should only have to steal all the things back again."

"Ah, but you would first have to go to prison," Guerchard reminded him. "Come, do you accept?"

Lupin Accepts.

"No. She won't go to jail. You have got to prove she is a thief, and you can't do it."

Bourain appeared at the door and saluted his chief, eying Lupin malevolently.

"Sonia Kritchenoff is here," he reported.

"Arrest her," Guerchard said shortly.

Before Bourain could move Lupin had him by the throat.

"No, no," he cried. "For God's sake, Guerchard, don't."

"You accept?" Guerchard asked.

"Yes, I accept," Lupin replied, releasing Bourain.

"Very well, then," Guerchard cried, triumphantly. "Give me the Duke of Charmerace's death certificate. And the pictures and tapestries and the tiara."

Lupin handed over the documents.

"Here are safety deposit receipts for the articles," he said. "The tiara is under your foot."

In astonishment Guerchard looked at the stool, tapped it, raised the lid and took out the glittering gem from its hiding place. After weighing it lovingly he said:

"Your accomplice?"

Lupin placed his revolver on the table. Guerchard noticed a bulge in another pocket.

"What have you there?" he asked.

"A pocketknife," Lupin said.

"Is it large?"

The Unwelcome Bracelets.

"Tolerable large." Lupin replied, drawing out a clasp dirk about half a foot long, and placing it beside the revolver.

"Anything else?"

"Yes, a toothpick," replied the Prince of Thieves, taking the little instrument from a waistcoat pocket and placing it beside the other weapons.

"And now your hands." Guerchard said, with a note of final triumph, producing a pair of handcuffs, linked together by a chain. Lupin looked at them hesitatingly, but as he finally held out his wrists for the unwelcome bracelets he murmured with a shake of his head:

"To love so much and be trusted so little."

Guerchard drew back with a long sigh of pure joy. Lupin looked at him with a gleam of amusement. Then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, Sonia is free. Let her go."

"Don't you want to see her?" Guerchard asked.

Lupin had a struggle with himself. Sonia did not know; perhaps if she went away without seeing him now she might never know. She might always retain her belief in him, her faith in the noble man she knew and loved. He feared she would despise him as a thief, even though she had given in to temptation.

"You Only Pity Me?"

"No, no, no, let her go," he cried desperately at last, but at that instant she entered the room and heard him.

He turned his back to her and sat down on the sofa, hiding the handcuffs from her eyes. She stood still in shocked surprise.

"What! You don't want to see me?" she wailed.

Guerchard interrupted.

"You are free and you owe your liberty to him," he said, pointing to Lupin. Sonia stood transfixed, a picture of desolation.

"To him!" she cried. "And he throws me up liberty as a charity. When I got his message I thought: 'He has asked to see me. Perhaps he loves me.' But now I see I was wrong. You only pity me; it is not love."

"If I spoke words of remorse and repentance I would still be a thief in your eyes. When I made my love I resolved to give up my former life. I gave my life to you and I loved you."

She spoke with tremendous passion and her soft, musical voice thrilled Lupin as he had never been thrilled before. Guerchard sat on the edge of the table, an interested spectator.

"And now you don't want even to see me," Sonia went on. "I shall never see you again. I am going back to Russia where I shall not come back. But before I go won't you just take my hand? The thought of being a thief sickens me. I am going to be good."

There was a wealth of love and promise in her words. She advanced a step toward Lupin, who turned still further away.

"I can't," he said, hiding his handcuffs. "I am very well, then, I will go. Goodby."

Sonia's Love.

She started toward the door. Lupin spoke again, and she stopped.

"You said just now that the thought of being a thief sickened you. Do you mean that?"

"Yes, I mean it."

"Suppose—suppose I am not the man you think I am?"

"What do you mean?" she cried, stepping back toward him.

"Suppose I am not the Duke of Charmerace?" Lupin said. "Suppose I am not even an honest man? Suppose I am a thief? Suppose I am——"

"Arsene Lupin!" the cold voice of Guerchard supplemented when he hesitated at the name.

Sonia looked at him in stupid wonder for an instant. Then a light broke upon her, and she knew what his sacrifice had been.

"You Arsene Lupin!" she cried. "Oh, I see it all now. You gave yourself up for me. I'll be for my sake you are going to prison. Oh, God, how happy I am."

She threw herself on her knees beside him, and was clasped in his arms. Looking on probably Guerchard muttered:

"And this is what women call repentance!"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WORLDLY ANALYSIS

"DO you think I ought to consider wealth in selecting a husband?" said the confiding girl.

"It depends," answered Miss Cayenne, "on whether you are looking forward to a happy home or to a divorce that will pay dividends."

When the Boss Gets Back

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WE'VE dusted off the dingy sign that bade us "DO IT QUICK!"
Along the wall a whirring line of loud typewriters click;
The clerk don't glance at the cashier with fond, adoring looks,
But bends with eager industry among his canvas books,
And Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith are busy gentlemen
In keeping us all hustling, now the boss is back again.

When we come in, we slam our desks wide open with a jerk,
And grab our pens with feverish haste, and get right down to work;
We get a lot accomplished ere the day is half begun
And thrill with pride to think it all is excellently done;
But when the boss approves the job that we've been toiling at,
The man above us comes along and says "Yes, I did that!"

Somehow we always plug along in much the same old way,
And try to do a fair day's work in pretty near a day;
But few among us here below were born with nerve enough
To pass up the temptation to toss off a modest bluff,
And so we tauten up the lines, and pull in all the slack,
And seem a little busier when the b oss gets back.

Percy Longs for Useful Discoveries

By HANK.

"I' COMPOSED some poetry to-day," said Percy to the Show Girl.

"Oh, how lovely," replied his companion; "did you write it to me?"

"No, I didn't," said Percy.

The Show Girl looked disappointed.

"Oh, dear," she sighed, "there ain't no more romance like in the olden times, when every guy was a cavalier and sung serenades or sonnets to his loved one."

"That's the fault of the loved ones," said Percy. "The only kind of a sonnet they seem to appreciate nowadays is a two-cent piece of looking-glass before taking and as much of hubby's week's pay as they can get, after taking."

"Oh, they ain't all like that," responded the Show Girl. "There are a few like myself who hunger for sentimentalness"——

"Wha-a-t?" gasped Percy.

"Aw, you know what I mean," retorted the Show Girl. "A pinch of mush now and then with a goo-goo and a kiss-me-I'm-full-of-chocolate bunch of tripe thrown in."

Ode to the Explorers

"Now that you speak plainly I understand you," said Percy, "and I'm sorry I didn't write you any poetry. No, I wrote a few lines about the discoverers of the North Pole. It seemed to me that their time had been wasted when there were so many useful things to be discovered right here."

"Well, let's hear the poetry," said the Show Girl.

"It begins like this," said Percy, pulling a bunch of notes from his pocket and reading:

"Both Dr. Cook and Peary
Have found the old North Pole,
And soon the frip ther made will be
A regular daily stroll;
But while they're getting honors
And praise the country sings;
'Twould be sublime if they'd take time
To find some other things.'

"That's as far as I go," said Percy, "but I thought that maybe you and I could finish the poem with a couple of choruses showing just what the people would like to see some one discover."

"It was very nice of you to ask me to help you," said the Show Girl, "but I wish you would make up the first chorus so that I could get wise to your idea."

The First Chorus

"Well," said Percy, "I'll try," and after a few moments scribbling he read:

"A dye-cent way to Coney,
A meter that won't lie,
A cure for squalling babies,
Some real good apple pie."

"That's great," exclaimed the Show Girl, "especially about the apple pie. I also had any good apple pie for even so long. It would be great if some one discovered some. But, say, while you were working I got some ideas, too, on what us women would like to see discovered."

"Let's hear it," said Percy, and the Show Girl read:

"A husband who's a model,
A home without a frown,
A hairpin that won't fail to keep
Your puffs from falling down."

"Good," said Percy, "except that the model husband is easy to find. Wait till you marry me."

"Ah, forget it," said the Show Girl, "if I wasn't afraid of being left alone in some house, I wouldn't have linked up with you anyway. Got any more poetry?"

The Last Line

"Yes," said Percy; "there's some more, but I can't get the last line. Listen—

"Enough words in the subway,
To deaf and dumb—

A barber who is deaf and dumb—

"Now, what the deuce can we put in the last rhyme with squeak?" asked Percy, while the Show Girl wrinkled her alabaster forehead in perplexity.

"I know," she shouted. Listen:

"A PAY DAY TWICE A WEEK!"

"Say, Kid," said Percy, "if any one ever discovers that he'd certainly be able to sell it. He'd get batty on the spot. Let's cut out the poetry; I can feel my hair growin' already."

DRAMA

Orpheum Theatre Enters Upon Its First Season as the American Music Hall

It is now the American Music Hall instead of the Orpheum, with vaudeville succeeding the stock productions. The initial performances of this opening vaudeville week brought big audiences to the old house under its new name.

With the Romany Opera Company as headliner the first week's bill proved one carefully and delightfully compounded of music, comedy and novelty. The Romany company presented many selections includ. in the "Prolog from Pagliacci," a selection from "Mignette," an aria from "Martha," and the familiar "Funiculi Funicula" drinking song. Herbert Lloyd and his company in "The King of Diamonds" proved the really delightfully sensational offering of the evening and was a society drama not too hard to best. Lloyd and his company did some clever acting that called for round after round of applause.

Cameron and Gaylord in a skit, "Off and On," show tricks of the dressing room. William Morrow and Verda Mullins, with their company presented "Harper's Millions," a comic sketch which was well received. "The Royal Musical Five," with instrumental and vocal selections and their stage effects, presented an unusual and taking feature. The balance of the bill was fine.

Keith's.

At Keith's this week there is something to please every variety of theatre-goer. Notable among the many good offerings is the exhibition of "Peter the Great," a monkey that does a deal ahead of the many of his Darwinian predecessors on the stage. "Peter the Great" does things and he does them well. He eats stage meals with a knife and fork, plays cards, skates on roller skates, does a drunken breakdown and finally rides a bicycle. Mrs. Miriam O'Leary Collins and her company, which includes the popular Kate Ryan, presented the up-to-date farce, "The Suffragette," in a way that caused a perfect storm of applause and showed that the votes-for-women movement has many sympathizers here in Boston. If applause and appearances count for anything Mrs. Collins and her company in "The Suffragettes" are going to make a hit his here and everywhere this season. The farce was written for Mrs. Collins by her sister, Mrs. Theresa Crowley, the suffragette leader.

Miss Ray Cox, in her impersonations of the different types of women, is bitingly caustic and sarcastic at times. She impersonated the "baseball girl" with telling effect and droll caricature. Norman Bull, jr.'s baseball comedy act, "Swat Mulligan," with Miss Bolton as a principal part, was stagy and delightful. The rest of the offering was high class and pleasing.

Castle Square

Sheridan's witty classic, The School for Scandal," was produced at Castle Square theatre last night by the John Craig Stock Company before a crowded house. The audience was well pleased, judging from the applause and numerous curtain calls. The acting could hardly have been improved and the costumes were beautiful. Because of the gorgeous gowns and minuette which was danced at the end of the first act was an exceptionally entertaining feature. Mary Young, in the title role of Lady Teazle, was bewitching. Many who have seen her in different characterizations said that her impersonation of Lady Teazle was the best thing she has ever done. There was delightful snap and dash to her acting.

John Craig played the happy-go-lucky Charles Surface with an abandon that was refreshing. The Sir Oliver Surface of George Fessenden was of a high order as was also was the Sir Peter Teazle of Walter Walker, who was specially engaged for the production. The hypocritical Joseph Surface, with his many intrigues, was in splendidly acted by Thomas Friebus.

The role of Mrs. Candour, always meddling with other people's business and tearing their characters to shreds, was finely done by Mabel Colcord, while the Lady Sneerwell of Gertrude Bindley was equally good. Florence Shirley was a sweet piquant Maria. Others who did well in their respective parts were Donald Meek as Crabtree, Al Roberts as Moses, Wilfred Young as Sir Benjamin Backbite, and Bert Young as Sir Harry Bumper.

Globe.

With an all-star cast, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which on two other occasions has delighted Boston audiences, appeared at the Globe Theatre last night for a two-weeks engagement. That the play has lost none of its popularity since its last appearance here was shown by the reception last night.

The play is replete with humor and pathos. Of the long list of characters Miss Helen Wetherbee, as Mrs. Wiggs, is the central figure. She came up to everything expected of her and was roundly applauded for her acting. As Mis' Hoxy, Miss Viva Ogden made a decided hit. Her facial expressions and her quaint phrases kept the audience in a continual uproar. Percy Haswell as Asa Priest and Thomas Aiken in his character of Mr. Stubbins, war veterans and inebriate, respectively, Miss Dana and David Starrie was perfect. Others equally prominent in the play were Ruth Handforth, Irene Halloway, Anna Field, Florence Finley, Ruth Finley and Agnes Wilson

Majestic.

Only this week remains in which to see Sam Bernard in "The Girl and the Wizard" at the Majestic Theatre. This is the last week of Mr. Bernard's engagement. Hartley Manners and Julian Edwards is a combination that has given Boston pretty girls and attractive stage pictures, pretty girls and attractive stage pictures, new songs and, above all, the kind of music that goes quite a little into the serious field in his role of Shultz, the lapidary. Quite his comedy efforts lose none of their wonted flavor.

Colonial.

"The Round Up" is on its final week at the Colonial. This melodrama of Western life is extremely popular. It draws large audiences in spite of heavy counter-attractions now in town. The roar of battle, the stampede, the simple life of the ranch and the conflict of love and hate and the dashing atmosphere of the whole production make it of absorbing interest. The cowboy tricks are features. The audiences watch with absorbed interest. The cowboy tricks are features. The audiences watch with absorbed interest while Roy Holmes as Slim Hoover, the fat sheriff, rolls a cigarette with one hand or runs the gamut of a bad Indian. The mastery of a bucking bronche on the stage is thrilling. The feat in the mountains is one of the most vivid battle pictures ever staged.

Boston.

"The Gay Hussars," which began its second week at the Boston Theatre last night, is a musical and operatic delight. The absurdities of Bobby Nesrh, including his famous, "Strictly first class," are thrilling to all now. The artistic singing of Anna Sueron and of Harry Fellows and the leading romance parts and of the other members of the immense cast and company are admirable. The whirling Hungarian music appeals to all. The clever character work of Muriel Terry and that of Edeson is amusing and interesting at the same time. He has admirable support.

Tremont.

"The Man Who Stood Still" is about to move along on his stellar way. In other words, this is the final week of the engagement of Louis Mann at the Tremont Theatre in the strong drama of that name. Mr. Mann gives some of the best dramatic work that he has ever done in the role of watchmaker. He is splendidly supported by Kathryn Ann Wellman. Mathilde Cottrelly and others.

Bowdoin Square.

"Dora Thorne" and her sweet story are the powerful attractions this week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. The roles of Dora Thorne and Ronald Eric are taken by Miss Hunt with skill by Miss Charlotte Hunt and Frederick Vin Brunner in the other members of the Lothrop Stock Company handle the remaining roles faithfully.

Grand Opera House.

One of the best plays given this season at the Grand Opera House is "Young Buffalo in New York," a drama in four acts which opened to a large and enthusiastic audience last night. The play is intensely dramatic. The leading character was taken by Young Buffalo, who assumed a part entirely familiar to him, that of the scout. In the role Miss Blake as Caroline May was delightful and shared the honors with Young Buffalo. Wm. Wells as Mark Fillmore was very good, as was F. W. Preston in the part of Henry Warren. Daisy Chapin gave a good portrayal of Margaret Warren and Florence Wilmot as Virginia Hallock also deserved commendation.

Young Buffalo, assisted by Miss Caroline May, will give a stage reception at the Wednesday matinee. Souvenir photographs will be given every patron.

Columbia.

Matt Kennedy is greeting old Boston friends at the Columbia Theatre this week in the burlesque offered by Sam Dewey's company. His Irish comedy is as humorous as ever. Al C. Bruce, Adele Rainey, Lillie Stevens, Viola Bruce are other principals. The troupe put on two skits, "The Headtime Holiday" and "Queen of the Harem," both gay and lively. Tomorrow night there will be a wrestling match between Polinsky and Cyclone Burns. The amateurs come forth Friday night.

Gaiety.

The Marathon Girls are putting on one of the best burlesques ever shown at the Gaiety Theatre. Like its title, this production moves at a fast pace, and with a clever cast of principals, backed by a pretty and highly trained chorus, the surprises offered by the troupe are amusing satires on women of society and the modern wife. The olio is interesting, with the whole troupe as the feature act.

Howard Athenaeum.

Clem Bevins as the "Hemlock chap" is one of the uproarious fun-makers in "The Big Review Burlesque Company," which holds the stage at the Old Howard this week. His impersonations are clever. The work of comedienne Frankie Heath, Nellie Wilcox, Lillian Ardell, Nellie Bellew and Helen Williams attract special attention. In the olio part of the features are the Bordley Minstrel Trio, Whitney and Young, Mildred Morton in singing and Kid Karson, the cowboy crack shot. Returns from the Langford-Ketchell contest will be read from the stage Friday night.

Austin & Stone's.

The "Hottest Coons in Dixie" have brought the sunny southland district to Austin & Stone's Museum. The popular amusement place is echoing to plantation songs, the twang of the banjo and the mellow notes of real "coon" voices. Other features are the knockabout comedy of John A. Lovely, the songs and dances of Pinkkett and Ritter, a funny sketch by the inimitable Jackson Hillyard company, and a new bill by the merry Manhattan Girls.

New Palace.

Fields and Arnold, in a new comedy sketch, head the bill at the New Palace for the week. Other acts on the strong bill are Jerome Hunter's comedy acrobatics, Grace Hayward's character soubrette, Joseph Whitehead, in eccentric comedy; Edith Fox, character artist; illustrated songs and Miller motion pictures.

Norumbega Park.

This is the final week of the open-air theatre season at Norumbega Park. The headline act is that of the Everett troops of equilibrists, contorters, gymnasts and ballancers. Added to this are M. Lambert and company in "cello and violin playing. Lambert plays on a $5,000 cello made by Gasparo di Salo about 1620. Other features include Curtis, Wilson and company in a comedy sketch, Eddie Leslie in monologue, Henderson and Thomas, colored dancers and the komograph.

Premier.

The Humanoscope at the Theatre Premier presents "The Jilt" and "It's an Ill Wind That Blows No Good." Mozart's "Requiem," "Hymn's Bride," "Amateur Detective" and "A Child's Prayer" are among the films. Musical numbers are by Miss Edna Leader, Miss Grace Palmer and Miss Gertrude Benn. The film, "Arctic Seas," illustrative of the dangers encountered by both Peary and Cook, is also among the features.

Hub.

Hub Theatre patrons are being treated among other features, to a novel sketch, "Mandy Hawkins" by Mr. and Mrs. Dunny Mann. It is an old home story of rural life. Mann and Mrs. Mann assisted the clever acts are Eckel and Dupree in farce comedy with the night boats for New York.

The summer King Philip, which sails from Commercial Wharf at 10 a. m. daily and Sunday, goes to the deep sea fishing grounds. Heavy catches are reported.

Travel on the Joy Line from Boston to New York is keeping up well this late Summer season.

Pastime.

Jack Cameron, the eccentric comedian, is a hit on the week's bill at the Pastime Theatre. George Donaldson, singing comedian; Joe Howard in Shickspere Victoria; and Charles and Agnes Naughton are other features. The new biograph pictures are clear cut and perfect in their realistic effect.

Scenic Temple.

Indefer Present, in a new line of comedy and mimicry, is the feature at the Scenic Temple this week. He keeps the audience in a continuous laugh. Henry Dick, in "illustrated songs and moon shooter," is another big act. New moving pictures and illustrated songs and instrumental music by the Scenic orchestra round out the long bill.

By Boat and Rail.

September shows no falling off of passenger on the trips of the steamer Cape Cod from Boston to Provincetown. The boat sails from Boy line wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue.

The steamer Cape Ann sails from Central wharf twice daily for Gloucester, passing up the beautiful North Shore by Summer homes of the wealthy.

The deep sea fishing steamer Satellite sails at 10 A. M., daily and Sunday, from Central wharf for fine fishing grounds.

A fine trip this bracing weather is on the special trolley which leaves Post Office square at 2:30 p. m. daily, except Sunday, for Providence and Fall River, connecting with the night boats for New York.

W. Stuart Spaulding, Rich Boston Bachelor, Takes Chicago Girl as Bride To-day.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

This is the wedding day in Chicago of pretty Katrina Fairlee and William Stuart Spaulding, one of Boston's wealthiest and most prominent clubmen. The marriage takes place this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sidney Fairlee, at the family Summer home at Southworth, Ill., and brings to a happy climax the interesting romance which started when Boston's most sought after society bachelor and the handsome Chicago belle were on shipboard, on voyage from San Francisco to Honolulu for a trip around the world.

William Spaulding and his brother John, who is some years younger, as he graduated from Harvard in '02, and William in '98, have for some time been looked upon as two of the most desirable catches in Boston society, and now that the other is out of the running, demure debutantes and managing mammas are making dark threats of their wiles and witcheries, hoping that he, at least, may not escape and fly to some other port for his bride. Spaulding is among the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, the Country, Automobile, Exchange Yacht and Myopia clubs, and the New York Yacht and Racquet Club.

The engagement was announced early in the Summer, and was the cause of much rejoicing on the part of the friends of the pair, for the match is considered quite ideal.

Upon Mr. Spaulding's arrival in Boston she will become the mistress of one of the handsomest and most beautifully appointed homes on Beacon street, as well as the fine country place at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. W. Scott Fitz of Beacon street, who has been at Manchester-by-the-Sea during the summer, is now at the mountain camp in Jackson, N. H., where she is enjoying out-door life to the utmost and entertaining extensively. Mrs. Fitz will remain there until the first of October, when she will open her house in town. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Holmes, are to visit in Boston a few days, and will then go to Maine, returning later to their country place at Wellesley. Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth, Mrs. Fitz's sister, is also at Jackson.

Mrs. William L. Jackson is departing Cambridge this year and is coming into Boston for the Winter. She has taken a house on Beacon street, where she plans to do considerable entertaining in honor of her young daughter, Miss Margaret Jackson, who will be numbered among the season's debutantes. Mrs. Jackson and her daughter have only recently returned from Europe. They are now at the North Shore for a few weeks prior to opening their town house.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana of Cambridge are at present in Nova Scotia, where they are the guests of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dana, before leaving their Summer home at Manchester, had as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Henry C. deRham of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fearing, jr. (Hester A. Cushing), who have a Summer home at Westwood, have left their place at Newport and have gone to Boston, as Professor and Mrs. Merritt L. Fernald and child of Cambridge are visiting Mrs. Fernald's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cushing, at their home on Bowen street in Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. DeForest are returning to Newport next week for the Autumn season. They are to occupy the Truxtun Hills, in which Miss Mary Ogden Ames has spent the Summer and where she has entertained many Boston people in the course of the season. The Lothrop Ames party have just completed a month of her stay in Newport. Miss Ames has gone to North Easton for the remainder of the season.

Senator and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore are entertaining a large dinner party this evening at their home at Newport. A number of Boston people are to present and among their guests are officers from the United States navy and the German army.

Among the Boston people who are expected home from abroad when the Celtic reaches here on Thursday are Frederick Ayer, member of Somerset Club, Mrs. J. Tucker Burr of Marlboro street, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Paine and Miss Georgina Paine of Mt. Vernon street, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft of Beacon street and Mrs. Charles H. W. Foster and her three daughters of Charles River village. Mrs. William Bartlett Tyler are in Berlin this week.

THE PERFUME OF THE LADY IN BLACK

A Mystery Story by the Author of "The Yellow Room"

By GASTON LEROUX.

Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's

ROULETABILLE entirely ignored the fact that he had only the day before spent two hours in recounting to Mme. Edith the exploits of Ballmeyer.

"After having read this," he went on, "ask yourself whether the chief characteristic of such an individual would have found very great difficulty in presenting himself before your eyes under the form of an unknown, you had not seen in four years—for it was four years, Madame, since you had seen Old Bob, until that time that started out to the ends of the Pampas to look for him. As to the memory of M. Arthur Rance, who started out with you on that journey, it would be even less distinct than your own and he would be more capable of being deceived than yourself with your relative. I implore you on my knees, Madame, do not lose patience with us. The situation, Heaven knows, is grave enough for each and every one of us. Let us remain united."

"You tell me to rid you of my presence. I am going but I shall return; for if it is necessary, taking everything into consideration, to arrive at the intolerable conclusion that Lazarus has assumed the name and likeness of Monsieur Bob, himself, in which case, Madame, I shall be at your disposal once more humble and obedient servant."

Mme. Edith assumed the attitude of an outraged tragedy queen, and Rouletabille, turning to Arthur Rance, continued:

"You all that has happened, M. Rance, I make you my humblest excuses and also to your wife. I count upon you as the loyal gentleman that you are and already have begun to persuade the lady to be patience a little longer. I realize that you have been pained to approach her with having stated my hypothesis too quickly and too abruptly, but, please remember, it is only a few seconds since Madame reproached me with being too blind."

But Arthur Rance seemed to have ceased to listen. He took his wife's arm and both moved toward the door and were about to leave the room, when the curtain door and the stable boy, Walter, Old Bob's faithful servant, rushed into the room.

His clothing was torn, muddy and covered with burs and thistles. Perspiration was streaming down his forehead and cheeks, his hair was in disorder and his eyes were set and staring. He looked terror with terror which made us fear some new misfortune. In his hand he held the silver ring which he threw upon the table.

This repulsive object, stained with great blotches of reddish brown was (as we discovered immediately) the cause of his horror; nothing other than the sack which had been found in the cave of the mountain.

With a harsh voice and savage gestures, Walter began to speak. He used good, pronounceable things in his broken jumble of French and English but no one listened to the exception of Arthur Rance and Mme. Edith, who asked each other, "What is he saying? What is he trying to tell?"

Arthur Rance interrupted him from time to time, but Walter always had his mind pointedly at the rest of us and cast fiery glances at Roultabille. For a single moment, it seemed as though he intended to seize the latter by the throat, but a gesture from Mme. Edith restrained him. Then he resumed speaking. Arthur Rance translated his words for us.

"He says that this morning he noticed blood stains on the English cart and saw that the body was no longer in the carriage. This puzzled him so much that he decided to speak of it at once to Old Bob, but he sought him in vain. Then, seized by a dark foreboding, he followed the prints of the horse's feet and the wheels of the vehicle which he could easily do because the road was muddy and the wheels had sunk deep. Finally he reached the old Castillon and noticed that the wheels led up to a deep chasm into which he descended, believing that he should find the body of his master; but he saw merely this empty sack which may have contained the corpse of Old Bob, and now, having caught a ride in a peasant's wagon, he has returned to ask for his master, to learn whether anyone has seen him, and, if he has, to accuse Robert Darzac of having caused his death."

We stood confounded. But, to our great astonishment, Mme. Edith was the first to receive self-possession.

GRAND TRUNK TO ACQUIRE ALLAN LINE?

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14.—A special to the Express from Montreal says:

"The Allan Line fleet of steamships is to be reorganized, prior to a radical change in the management, according to a statement made by Sir Montague Allan this morning.

"What the change in management will be, one guess is offered, the answer to which is the Grand Trunk Pacific.

"Further than the bare announcement Sir Montague would not go, saying that on the return of his colleague, Hugh Andrew, from England, the general scheme of reorganization would be given to the public."

The decision of reorganization follows the transfer of the control of the line from G. and A. Allan of Glasgow to H. and A. Allan of Montreal.

Asked whether any difference would be made in the ports from which Allan vessels now sail, Sir Montague said that the large holdings which the line has along the waterfront of the different cities would probably keep them using the ports of course they have in the past.

Portland he said was just as good a Winter port as any along the Atlantic and that they would stick to it for Winter port business.

NAME LOVETT FOR CHAIRMAN OF S. P. BOARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Southern Pacific directors today elected former Judge Robert S. Lovett chairman of the executive committee, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of E. H. Harriman. Jacob H. Schiff and William Rockefeller were elected members of the board and were also placed on the executive committee. With Lovett's nephew practically all of the unlimited power possessed by Harriman in the affairs of the Union and Southern Pacific roads is transferred to Judge Lovett.

The presidency of Union Pacific is still to be filled, but there is little doubt now that Judge Lovett will be accorded that honor as well at the annual meeting in October. The Pacific presidency is also said the real power rests with the chairman of the executive committee. As chairman Harriman wielded the affairs of the system with far more autocratic power than is wielded by any other corporation official in the world. The hundreds of millions he added to the roads are now at his absolute disposal and now, in the same manner they will be at the behest of Judge Lovett.

Judge Robert S. Lovett, who has been elected chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

Man on Whose Shoulders Harriman Mantle Falls

8 LABORERS NEAR DEATH BY BURSTING PIPE

Eight laborers employed in digging a twenty-foot drainage well in Brattle street, Cambridge, for the new Cambridge subway, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury when a huge ten-inch water main burst, filling the excavation and flooding the streets for an eighth of a mile.

Quick work on the part of twenty other workmen saved the laborers deep down in the hole. Ropes were thrown them but by the time the last man was hauled out the water had risen to his chin.

The men were down in the well when the main, which was fifteen feet above them, suddenly burst. The water spouted twenty or thirty feet in the air like a geyser. Then a tremendous volume of water poured into the hole. The shouts of the men alarmed those above, and armed with ropes men rushed to the scene from every direction.

Quick work was necessary, for the well was filling fast from the bottom of the ditches which were also well filled by this time. The struggling men were lifted one and one by one were drawn, half-drowned to the surface.

The subway contractors hurried a big pump to the scene to draw the flood from the well and at the same time telephoned to the Superintendent of Sewers. The main, meanwhile was ripping up Brattle and Mount Vernon streets with the spouting water which bore off a flood along Brattle street past the police station and along Mount Vernon street to Huron avenue, for a mile distant. In about a half hour the water was shut off, but for hours the streets stood full from lop of curb to curb.

BALLOONIST 'LOST,' IS FOUND SAFE AT HOME

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—While a searching party in automobiles was hunting through the Berkshire mountains for Cliff Gold and Harmon, the aeronaut's partner and soothsayer of E. C. Benedict, who as wended in his balloon from Lenox yesterday afternoon, and who was believed to have met with an accident, the balloonist was found to-day calmly eating his breakfast in his home at No. 315 Madison avenue.

"Well what do you think of that?" exclaimed the chairman when told of the organization of the searching party and of the hunt that was being made for him. "It was very kind of them, I assure you. It looks as if I had beaten them out."

"You see, it was like this," said Mr. Harmon. "After my balloon had ascended about 100 feet I discovered that my appendix rope had not been undone. This I very soon set loose and then I believe that I had lost control of the gas valve. After jumping the rope I began to rose to an altitude of about 2,000 feet and thought it best to remain there, with perfect control toward the mountains.

"After crossing up for some time I determined to land as near as possible to a railroad station. I came down to within a few feet of the ground. Once more I rose and making inquiries from a party of men, was told that the station in a certain number of miles ahead of me.

"I found a good landing again to about 4,000 feet I remained in the air for about an hour and a half. With darkness approaching, I determined to land and came down on a mountainside about ten miles north of Sheldon Falls in the Berkshires. Finding the bag in care of a farmer, I hurried to the station at Sheldon Falls and caught the midnight train in Lenox, arriving in New York at 6 o'clock this morning."

Mr. Harmon, in his balloon, "The Heart of the Berkshires," left Lenox at 2:20 yesterday in the afternoon. The wind and to-day the searching party was organized.

WORCESTER NOW OVERRUN BY RATS

WORCESTER, Sept. 14.—A feature of the no-license regime in Worcester is complained of by the merchants in the center of the city, who are reporting the loss of large amounts of provisions from depredations of rats. The proprietors of the big department stores declare that until recently free from the rats, but lately their stocks have become overrun with the pests that eat everything that they can bite.

The reason for the invasion is said to be the absence of the nearly 100 saloons which gave the rats a fat living in the days and nights they were open.

URGE UNIFORM BANK LAWS TO AVERT PANICS

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The opening session of the American Bankers' Association convention began to-day when President George M. Reynolds called the several thousand delegates already assembled in the Auditorium Theatre to order and Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, D. D., Plymouth Congregational Church of Chicago, delivered the invocation. The theatre was well filled when Governor Charles S. Deneen began his speech of welcome, which was interrupted at frequent intervals by enthusiastic applause.

Joseph T. Talbot, president of the Chicago Clearing Association, followed Governor Deneen with the official address of welcome. He said in part:

"The most important work to which this association can devote itself is that which is influencing and in shaping State and general economic laws. I mean those which embody correct principles and which will promote sound banking. We have been sailing for a long time through financial fog, and while in some quarters the sky seems to be clearing, the behavior of popular sentiment on financial subjects unhappily is not in sight; nor can we yet discern the shore line of terra firma in our monetary system.

"The matter of State legislation with respect to banks and the business of banking is of nearly equal importance and should not escape attention.

"Existing laws are the natural outgrowth of the local assertions found in certain sections. It may require twenty or thirty years to undo this harm, but it is not to be doubted in the long run that we shall have a national system which will protect us against disastrous panics and curtail the evil. Now, we shall have a sound and wholesome State banking law providing abundant regulations which, after all, is the best safeguard, and that under these laws there shall flourish a system of banks as safe and as efficiently managed as any in the world."

In response to the address of welcome was made by Colonel Robert J. Lowry of Atlanta, Ga., ex-president of the association.

A central bank with a capital of not less than $100,000,000 was advocated by Mr. Reynolds.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, Sept. 14.—By the action of the Union Pacific directors a tradition is shattered, with a resulting confidence is insured for the immediate future. The insiders know that E. H. Harriman's pollcies are to be carried out in detail, even though a legal battle might be necessary to enforce such measures. But the public is hypnotized with the talk of segregation and some of the directors are not unspoken in favor of it since Mr. Harriman's death.

$ $ $

The suggestion offered in this paper that insiders had sold heavily of Union Pacific, beginning with Hartman's arrival from Europe and that the short-sale liquidation would be repurchased at a lower level, is being verified by the market. The retirement has not yet begun and may not begin for several months. If then, Union Pacific finds no authoritative support, naturally. Meanwhile the Street will be flooded with Union Pacific certificates bearing big names, a torrent which is not at all conducive to bullishness. At the same time the inside element intends to replenish its stock is, of course, anybody's guess.

$ $ $

Persons who know Mr. Lovett are assured that the new master is just as powerful as the old one. In Harriman's absence. They know that he has the enthusiastic backing of all that is good and conservative in the Standard Oil. They believe his knows the law and that he will stand for the legal rights of the remaining stockholders. He is in charge permanently. It will take the public several weeks to realize all these things, and in the meantime Harriman's real friends will quietly replace the lists of stock they liquidated before his death and get ready to join the Morgan group in the big bull movement that J. P. Morgan has promised for the next eight months.

$ $ $

Those Union Pacific directors who are entertaining themselves and their friends with schemes to get at the Union Pacific surplus are talking once prudently every day. Their idea now is to organize an entirely new company with something like $500,000,000 capital to purchase Union Pacific common, preferred and convertible bonds after the Union Pacific has sold its investment holdings to an investment company in control for the exchange of stock of the investment company. The investment are not to be distributed at all. The Union Pacific company and its scheme of running a banking and railroad combination are to be interfered with in the least. All this bokus pokus is to be gone through with so that the public may get the preferred stockholders get a bonus of about $21 a share, but on what grounds nobody wil lexplain.

Bankers are beginning to complain that they are getting out of step in the general prosperity. Because money is so cheap, they say, no profit is left for them. They propose to advance the lending rate quietly, by as high as a whisper, without actually calling out the Aldrich reserve. They believe they can put this over on the public without a panic, and they are going to try it. Fortunately, there is something about the money supply of the world this year, and of the currents that govern it, that will not force the rate to the desired level. An abundant supply of gold is coming to us, and the bankers' scheme is going before the public at a time when it is in no mood to be influenced on the enemy long before it begins to fight. The bankers' scheme will be strangled this year with the same ease that $500,000,000 of extra rail money.

It may be depressing news to the conveners of the bankers' convention in Chicago that they are getting out of step in the general prosperity. Because money is so cheap, they say, no profit is left for them. They propose to advance the lending rate quietly, by as high as a whisper, without actually calling out the Aldrich reserve. They believe they can put this over on the public without a panic, and they are going to try it. Fortunately, there is something about the money supply of the world this year, and of the currents that govern it, that will not force the rate to the desired level. An abundant supply of gold is coming to us, and the bankers' scheme is going before the public at a time when it is in no mood to be influenced on the enemy long before it begins to fight. The bankers' scheme will be strangled this year with the same ease that $500,000,000 of extra rail money.

Another advance in wheat at Chicago attracted much attention. This movement is based on a net increase for the month, and what is rising on account of the increase; a comparatively rather than a decrease of production, the movement being helped by the abnormal demand for the cash grain. It seems to be clearing, the harbor of popular soundness on financial subjects unhappily is not in sight; nor can we yet discern the shore line of terra firma in our monetary system.

The matter of State legislation with respect to banks and the business of banking is of nearly equal importance and should not escape attention.

"Existing laws are the natural outgrowth of the local assertions found in certain sections. It may require twenty or thirty years to undo this harm, but it is not to be doubted in the long run that we shall have a national system which will protect us against disastrous panics and curtail the evil. Now, we shall have a sound and wholesome State banking law providing abundant regulations which, after all, is the best safeguard, and that under these laws there shall flourish a system of banks as safe and as efficiently managed as any in the world."

In response to the address of welcome was made by Colonel Robert J. Lowry of Atlanta, Ga., ex-president of the association.

A central bank with a capital of not less than $100,000,000 was advocated by Mr. Reynolds.

MORE CAPITAL FOR ATHOL GAS

The Gas and Electric Light Commissioners gave a hearing to-day on a petition of the Athol Gas & Electric Light Company for authority to issue 1,748 additional shares of capital stock at par. Counsel stated that the proceeds is to be used in paying a bonded debt arising out of permanent improvements in the plant. The price to stockholders is to be $100. The outstanding capital is $50,000.

UNION PACIFIC SOARS AGAIN

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A spectacular rise in the price of Union Pacific preferred was the feature of trading in Wall street to-day. On a comparatively light volume of transactions it advanced 4¾ points in half an hour. Its strength caused the elimination of all kinds of stories regarding plans for the segregation of the company's assets. The best informed investing authorities, however, say there will probably be a distribution of profits made by the investment branch of the Union Pacific Railroad, but that the investment department will be segregated from the railroad company. No announcement is expected, however, in this regard for about a month, as Jacob H. Schiff sailed for Europe today to be gone about that length of time.

Because of the strength of Union Pacific preferred the common stock advanced nearly two points. Southern Pacific rose one point, New York Central one point and Reading one and a half points. Other stocks that showed great strength and activity were Atchison, Great Northern, American Telephone and Pennsylvania.

One dark spot in the stock market at present is the weakness of the copper shares, due to the annual report of the Copper Producers' Association, which showed that production exceeds consumption. Anaconda declined nearly a point today, while other standard railroads and industrial shares were advancing. Amalgamated copper rose half a point, but it was due to the covering of short contracts.

Brokers consider the weakness of the copper shares a bull argument on the general stock market, because it insures cheap copper for the industrial companies.

American shares were firm in the early trading in London, but later turned heavy. Mining shares were heavy on the curb market.

LIGHT TRADING STRONG TONE

STATE STREET, Sept. 14.—Stocks were characterized by strength this forenoon even though trading was light. There was little news to influence trading but mining shares are technically in a strong position and offerings are light.

American Telephone continues to be absorbed for New York accounts. The price rose 1¼ points further this forenoon to 143¼. Lake Copper showed a 1¼ point advance to 36 with the buying largely for western account. North Butte improved fractionally to 57½, but changes otherwise were slight and the market dull.

Western Telephone moved up in sympathy with the parent company and sold at 11¼, the latest Print maintained yesterday's advance on rumors of another plunge to come in stockholders.

Curb trading was quiet, and prices were generally steady. National Exploration was a weak spot, and on free offerings broke from 6¾ to 6¼ easy. The Nevada Copper Belt Railroad, controlled by the Nevada-Douglas Copper Company, is expected to be completed by Thanksgiving.

KING EDWARD'S SUMMER GIRLS

—The latest fad of England's monarch will be told in detail and superbly illustrated in the Sunday American.

HORACE PARTRIDGE'S GRANDSON DROWNED

Word was received in Watertown to-day of the death by drowning at San Juan, Porto Rico, last Sunday of Horace Partridge, Jr., nineteen years of age, son of Frank Partridge of Brookline, that town, and grandson of the late Horace Partridge, founder of the firm of Horace Partridge & Company, sporting goods. He had graduated from Yale College, but because of ill health was obliged to give up his studies and went to Porto Rico. For a time he was in the United States custom service, but of late had been made secretary of the franchise committee of the Executive Council of Porto Rico, one of the highest position. Last Sunday he was drowned from a sail boat in the harbor there.

LA FOLLETTE IN PINCHOT QUARREL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Senator La Follette has taken a hand in the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy to the extent of calling the attention of the President to the laxity in the enforcement of the work of caring for the forest area within the Wisconsin Indian reservation. This was done recently in a letter sent by the Wisconsin Senator to President Taft.

TIMILTY IS VERY BITTER ON STUMP

Alderman "Jim" Timilty mounted a furniture van last night and rode through Ward 18. He was followed by a large crowd. Different stops were made and the city father buried words javelins of fire and brimstone under all Representative Thomas J. Fay and Timothy F. Murphy, both of whom are opposing John J. Butler, his candidate for the Senatorial nomination in the Seventh Suffolk District, made up of Wards 18, 19 and 22. He was bitter in his denunciation of ex-Alderman Frank J. O'Toole, who is heading an opposing delegation.

"YOUR WIFE WILL BE MINUS YOU"

MARLBORO, Sept. 14.—Judge McDonald of this town, who has been active in having the liquor laws enforced, to-day received a threatening letter which reads: "Stevens—Some fine day your wife will be minus you!" The police are investigating the matter. "No Black Hand letter will scare me in the least in punishing offenders of the liquor laws," said Judge McDonald.

Lord Rosebery Dislikes the English Budget

Quite Naturally, We Have Roseberys Like Him Over Here

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

In England they are building more and more Dreadnaughts to protect the valuable property and haughty national pride of the prosperous British.

Recently it has occurred to Lloyd George—a radical and democrat, such as we haven't got in this country—that the proud and prosperous Briton ought to pay his share toward building Dreadnaughts and running the government.

In a series of admirable speeches Lloyd George has supported a scheme of taxation, putting the load, or part of it, on the broad rich backs.

There has been a great deal of squealing, groaning and grunting among the owners of the broad backs. They really cannot understand the need of any change. They feel that the working men and the people of small means should continue carrying the load—according to the good old custom.

An individual whose squealing is most conspicuous is Lord Rosebery. This gentleman feels that it is socialistic to make wealth pay its share of taxes. He thinks that he is a liberal—poor, deluded plutocrat—and he thinks that he is a free trader. He says, however, that he would actually rather give up free trade and vote for protection than see great wealth taxed. This noble and unselfish gentleman suggests that, rather than tax wealth, a tariff be put on the workman's loaf of bread, and shin of beef, in addition to all the other taxes now put upon him.

How naturally such views come out of the mouth and the narrow heart of this noble Lord Rosebery, and all of his selfish class.

Rosebery has taken precious good care of himself. He began by marrying one of the Rothschild girls, and thus put in his pockets a comfortable slice of the vast Rothschild fortune.

Rosebery won the Derby, he ran the English government, he is a very intelligent man—although not intelligent enough to realize his own brutal class of selfishness. He imagines himself a leader in English life. Before ten years shall have passed he will be laughed at even by his own class as a man of narrow vision, and classed with the overfed, pampered pet pugdog that snaps first at the hand that feeds him.

Rosebery has been honored and made comfortable by the English people. He has millions that he never earned, and he fights a just plan to make him pay something toward the expense of government that protects him.

How like he is to our own "Roseberys" in America! It would be good for this country if we could send them about one hundred thousand of our men of the Rosebery type, intellectually selfish and brutal, and get in exchange one single man like Lloyd George, the best democrat that the English-speaking races have produced in fifty years.

"Chain Your Dog or Get Your Mail"

It Is About Time for Some Common Sense Ruling on Dogs

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

The United States Post Office Department has decided that it is no part of the duty of letter carriers to allow their legs to be chewed up by vicious dogs.

The following post office regulation has been officially adopted:

Carriers are not required to deliver mail at residences where vicious dogs are permitted to run at large. Persons keeping such dogs must call at the post office for their mail.

It is refreshing to have, even late, some common sense utterance on the dog question.

It is not enough, however, to say that the man who keeps a vicious dog must get his own mail. A vicious dog ought to be shot, and the keeper of it fined a hundred dollars, or as much as may be needed to impress upon his mind the fact that savage animals are out of place in civilization.

The day of the dog's usefulness has gone by. To-day he is a pet, a plaything, and very often a nuisance.

The barking dogs disturbing sleep at night should be suppressed and the dog's owner fined. Nobody should be allowed to keep a barking dog unless he takes his dog and moves off at least a mile from human habitations.

Hundreds of thousands of citizens lose their sleep because they haven't the common sense or moral courage to get together and drive out of the neighborhood the stupid owner of a barking dog, or compel him to shoot the dog.

Every day the newspapers print stories telling of women and children torn by ferocious dogs. The other day an unfortunate woman, owner of a bull terrier, fell in a fit. Another woman and her child went to the sick woman's assistance. The bulldog rushed at the woman that had come to the help of its mistress, tore her breast and throat until she was mortally wounded, then attacked and mangled the child that had come to its mother's assistance.

Occasionally when a dog bites human beings, and when it cannot be proved that the same dog had bitten other human beings, some judge is reported to say, "Every dog is entitled to one bite."

With this solemnly stupid utterance the dog and owner are set free. The judge might as well say that a man who uses a knife on a human being is entitled to one slash with his knife, or that a burglar is entitled to his first house-breaking enterprise.

The man who keeps a dog to flatter him with servility and cheap obedience should be held strictly responsible for what the dog does, whether it be the dog's first or five-hundredth official bite. The master knows very well whether or not his dog is of the savage kind. When a dog inflicts injuries the master should be punished as he would have been punished if he had inflicted those injuries with his own hands or teeth.

Dogs and cats spread disease; they are out of place in civilization; they encourage cruelty in children. They will soon vanish entirely; meanwhile they should not be a nuisance or a danger. It should be legal for any man disturbed by a barking dog to shoot that dog, after formal notice to the owner. The owner of a savage dog that mangles a child or woman should be put in jail, for the keeping of such a dog [illegible]

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE —ON— AEROPLANES AND MAN'S PROGRESS

Written for the Boston American.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner.

PEOPLE in the States are not situated as close to the scene of the recent grand aeronautic display near Rheims as are the French, the Germans and the English, and perhaps, therefore, are not so passionately inflamed with the aviation fever; but everything in Europe, both in the press and in ordinary conversation, centres around aeroplanes, monoplanes and biplanes.

Ten years ago any man would have been suspected of lunacy who to such degree and with such intensity should surrender himself to the possibilities and fascinations of the aerial world. Yesterday's foolishness, however, has become to-day's common sense, which would seem to mean that lunacy is intelligence in the bud, and that stupidity is wisdom imperfectly understood. Eccentrics, therefore, should be respected.

It is an interesting feature of man's nature that wherever he is put he finds the place too small for him and wants to move out. The world's history is a history of migrations. Populations have always been boiling over and spilling out into contiguous territory.

It is a fact to make humanitarians anxious that the human tide has now swept all the way from Central Asia, across Europe and the Atlantic and on as far as California, and there is no more continent waiting to be centered out into. Nothing more remains but to stay and be squeezed.

Wish Globe Bigger, That All Might Have Room to Grow

This same impulse that compels a chicken to break its shell has sent explorers in pursuit of the North Pole and the South Pole. The astronomers here pushed their observations up into the air and spend three hundred and sixty-five nights of every year feeling of the stars. Dr. Todd of Amherst, Massachusetts, is set on scraping acquaintance with the Martians. That is the way things are going.

The earth is 6,000 miles in circumference, but even the diameter of a man is more than that, and we are all wishing that our globe were as large as the planet Jupiter so that we might have room to expand to our natural dimensions. It is amusing, but it is suggestive, and is a tribute to a man's inwardly contained bigness.

The latest stage in this migratory process is the attempt to get up into space, to repeat gravitation and to make a convenience of the air as we have hitherto made a convenience of the ground and the sea. Ballooning is no longer a mental plaything. It has become business, and promises to be a serious practicality.

Gas Ballooning Is Play; Overlooks Principle of Aviation

Human genius is more than a match for nature. We make wind and steam draw our freight. The lightning we have caught and bridled and taught it to run our errands over the land and under the sea. We are no longer afraid of the world, except perhaps when it gets so inwardly convulsed as to break out into an earthquake. And there seems no a priori reason why we should not treat an familiarly what is above ground as we do the ground itself and what is underground.

Now that it is shown to be so simple a thing to heave anchor and sail about in the atmosphere and over the camping ground of the clouds, it seems almost strange that it has taken us so long to realize seriously the possibility of it. The birds do it so easily it would be queer if men could not do it.

Man is heavier than a bird, but it is weight in the bird, not levity, that makes flight possible. Ballooning with gas is not business, but play, and is forgetful of the underlying principle of genuine aviation.

It is no more presumption to sail up into space than it was felt to be for Columbus to start across seas from Palos; a great deal has come from Columbus. It is not too much to suppose that as much will come from the Wrights and from other members of the aeronautic fraternity.

After what we have learned of the contents of human genius and after the results that we have seen produced in the last half century, there is really nothing too great to expect. It will be surprising if nothing occurs to make us more and more surprised.

A Long Pipe

The longest pipe in the world is that which extends from the Oklahoma oil wells to New York Harbor. At the present time the oil field of Oklahoma is the most active in the United States. It is not likely that the line will be put to immediate use for conveying oil over the whole distance. The completion of the system is regarded rather as a provision for emergency, and to meet the future conditions, when the Pennsylvania and West Virginia fields shall have been depleted.—Scientific American.
